

USEFUL MEDICINE CASE.

It is designed especially for travelers and is homemade. In The Ladies' Home Journal not very long ago was given an illustrated description of a medicine case that affords no end of conveniences to travelers. This case may be made by taking two pieces of linen shaped somewhat like a four-leaved clover, having an oblong center  $8\frac{1}{4}$  by 6 inches, in size. This should have on all four sides flaps with rounded corners, those at the sides and top having a width of 6 inches at the greatest breadth and that at the foot measuring  $5\frac{1}{4}$ , as it is purposed to contain a double pocket. Then take a strip of thin board  $8\frac{1}{4}$  by 6 inches, cover on both sides with oiled silk and place between the similarly shaped centers. An interlining of oiled silk should be securely fastened between the two pieces of linen.

A row of machine stitching should then encircle and inclose the center to

TRAVELER'S MEDICINE CASE.

Hold the board firmly. Take a strip of the linen  $14\frac{1}{2}$  inches in length and wide. Bind securely with braid and ornament with a row of herringbone at top and bottom. Sew each end to the centerpiece, an inch from the feet. Fasten every three inches, making six compartments. Then cut two pieces of linen to fit the flap at the foot, making one half inch and the other  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inch shorter than this flap. Bind in like its straight edge. Then turn up the about the rounded edges, so that they over the larger, thus making two points almost the length of the flap which should contain a  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inch court-plaster, a flat roll of elastic twine, and the other list, if you can small bandages.

Bind and herringbone the corners and fasten with a ribbon from the upper pocket to the lower. Bullet shaped pieces of tape, a cord between, should hold the pieces in place after the last has been laid over the bottle, and the tape 48 inches long should be fastened to the edge of the upper flap to hold it whole securely.

Fashionable Hairdressing. There are two prevailing styles in New York, according to The Herald, which depicts some of the leading costumers. Women wear their hair distinctly undulating all around the head and with the back hair knotted lightly behind or a la pompadour, without parting the forehead at all and ending with a bow to give a loose, full effect on either side. As the knot it is gathered in a simple French knot, rather than in the head. In both styles of coiffure the ear only is concealed.

In Paris the last fashion is to wear it close to the head on the side.

STYLISH COIFFURES. with the hair entirely in evidence and much higher in the back. A short comb scooped out across the top, is worn just under the knot and fits closely. This comb keeps all refractory short-hair smoothly in place and gives the head a very charming contour. The front hair is worn as we wear it, but, through contrast to the less fluffy sides, appears to be higher.

Every woman wears something in her hair at the opera. It may be diamonds, a feather, a ring of roses, with an alert rising stiffly and smartly from the center, an ostrich plume or some such arrangement of bows of velvet ribbons.

Fashion's last effort declares that an ostrich plume or aigrette worn for beauty's head is indispensable to the woman who would be chic.

Banana Salad, Spanish Fashion. Banana-salad when served Spanish fashion is made as follows: First the fruit is sliced with a silver knife, then it is placed in a deep glass dish, the layers alternating with one of the cracked ice and powdered sugar. On this is poured a dressing of orange juice sweetened and flavored with vanilla, and the whole is set on the table for two hours before serving.

A Good Fig Pudding. It is learned from Table Talk that the good fig pudding may be made as follows: Chop a half of a pound of butter fine. Mix with it a tablespoonful of sugar, and a third of a cup of powdered sugar, 3 eggs beaten light with an egg separator, a cup of milk and a fourth of a cup of cake crumbs. Mix well, turn into a well-greased pudding mold and boil for three hours.
