OIL IN SOUTH AMERICA.

It is anticipated that the supplies of petroleum from Peru will in the near future be phenomenal in their abundance. The principal field is in the department of Pura. Estimates have been made as to the area yielding the oil, one of them putting it as high as 7,200 square miles; and, as the Pennsylvania field is reckoned at some 350 square miles, and has given forth some 516,000,000 barrels, the Peruvian promise is vast, the official statement showing that of forty-nine wells bored during the last four years, forty-four have been productive, a number of them yielding to the extent of 30,000 gallons per day. A London company has been working some of the wells with favorable results, and crude oil has for some time been used on the locomotives of all the Peruvian railways, also in several of the manufacturing establishments and in the gas works.

So Standard Oil meets another competitor that must become formidable. Baku, Barmah, California and Colorado are being reckoned with as price adjusters; and now comes a supply in South America that bids fair to eclipse the Baku phenomenon. With wells flowing 600 barrels a day, and an ascertained area of 7,200 square miles of oil, the South American market may be regarded as surely lost to outside producers. Every barrel of oil pumped or spouted from a Peruvian well is a regulator of the price of oil everywhere. And when the whole Peruvian tract shall be developed its operators will take a hand in the trade, wherever oil can be sold. Of course.

And it's a great thing for the world that its maker so distributes its resources, that no one of them can be monopolized.—Tradesman

RUSSIAN LAND CHANGES.

An important, perhaps momentous, change in land ownership is taking place in Russia. The nobility are gradually disposing of their real estate, and it is falling into new hands. In 1893—the latest year for which the complete statistics are obtainable—titled proprietors sold real estate to the amount of 5,500,000 acres, and bought only 2,900,000 showing a decrease in their holdings of 2,600,000 acres, all in European Russia. This land is now owned by persons who a generation ago were serfs, the absolute property of their lords, to be treated like any other chattels, and advertised for sale precisely as slaves in the United States were before the civil war. The process has been going on steadily ever since the serfs were emancipated, very slowly at the start, but gaining headway with every year that passed, till now there is in Russia, for the first time in history, a well differentiated "middle class," standing between the aristocrats on the one hand and the peasants on the other. This bourgeoisie is, of course, largely recruited from the tillers of the soil, but its members become as distinct from their former fellows as from their former lords. The newly enriched men are peasants who have contrived by superior cunning, sometimes by the possession of a modicum of education, and often by a comparatively sober course of life amid the general drunken license of the Russian village, to add field to field and ruble to ruble. They are the reverse of popular, for they are fond of getting up corners in grain, and as money lenders show a complete lack of conscience. The power that these comparatively small capitalists are acquiring tends toward democracy and a mitigation of Muscovite despotism, but is at the cost of establishing another tyranny, less unreasonable, indeed, and yet scarcely less hard to bear, than that founded on birth.—Ex.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Keeping Lent. Is this a fast to keep? The larder leaner And cleaner From fat of veales and sheape? Is it to quit the dish Of fishes, yet still To fill The platter high with fish. Is it to fast an hour, Or ragged goot, Or show A downcast look and soure? No! 'tis a fast to dole Thy sheafe of weate, And meate, Unto the hungry soule! It is a fast from strife, From old debate, And hate To circumsise "thy life." To show a hearty grife-remt, To starve thy sin, Not bin, And that's to keep thy Lent! —ROBERT HEINCK.

DOGS OF INTELLIGENCE.

A Strict Sabbatarian and a Traveler in Hansons. The Ladies' Kennel Journal consists of a number of dog anecdotes selected from many sources, new and old. The stories are arranged to illustrate different features of the dog's character. Here is an example of what is called a dog's "tenacity of impression," vouches for by an Edinburgh initiate: "One sacrament Sunday the minister left his house to the care of the servants, who thought it a good opportunity to give a party. During the day the dog (a Newfoundland) accompanied them through the garden, and indeed wherever they went, in the most attentive manner and seemed well pleased. In the evening, when the time arrived that the party meant to separate, they proceeded to 35 so, but the dog, the instant they went to the door, interposed, and placing himself before it, would not allow one of them to touch the handle. On their persisting and attempting to use force, he became furious and in a menacing manner drove them back into the kitchen, where he kept them until the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson."

From which it would appear that some dogs are Sabbatarians. At all events, he seems to have been of opinion that revelers in a manse on sacrament Sunday were out of place. Another story, illustrating the reason of a dog, is quoted as having been told by William Robson of Penzance, the owner of the animal. The dog was in the habit of going about in harness cab with his master. One day, after being lost, he went home by himself in harness.

"The cabman rang for his fare, and thinking he had somehow captured the runaway, I inquired how and where he found him. 'Oh, sir,' said cabbie, 'didn't he hail me at all; he hailed me.' He was standing close by St. James' church looking out for a fare, when in jumped the dog. I shouts through the window 'He wouldn't stir. So I gets down antries to pull him out and shows him my whip, but he sits still and barks a much as to say, 'Go on, old man.' I sees him by the collar I reads his name and address. My fine gentleman settles himself with his head just a-looking out, and I drives on till I stops a this gate. Then out jumps my pussen ger, a-clearing the doors, and walks in as though he'd been a regular fare."

The driving in cats dog is by no means a rare variety. It is told of Lord Ashburnham's collie that, after jumping into a handson, he so plainly intimate that he wants his collar read that, a one cabman said, "Blowed if he didn't ask me to."—Westminster Budget.

Sleep

Induced by the use of coca, opiate or narcotic compounds is bad, decidedly bad. It undermines the health and shatters the constitution and the patient is steadily growing into a worse condition—often resulting in the terrible slavery and misery of the cocaine and opium habit. Sleep induced by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla may not come as quickly, but it comes more surely, permanently and is
