WHO IS ENTITLED TO GIVE ?

"The handsome sum of $10,000 ha been given to Guilford College by the Duke Brothers. Wonder if the men, wo men and children, who are employed by these gentlemen will get the same wager as heretofore?"

The above taken from a North Carolina exchange is one of those contemptible flings that weak mind ed writers occasionally get off, think ing pechaps it is smart to discredit the money gifts of rich men.

If the rich people of this country should not make handsome dona tions to churches, hospitals and the various charities that always need pecuniary assistance, what a how there would be from this same clasof writers, as the above, who would show what miserly and sordid crea tures the rich men were.

The spirit which dictates such ms of the bequests of the Dukes, Astors, Rockefellers and others displays not merely meannes. but a very low order of meanness.

Who is entitled to give to chari ties, anyway? Must every rich mar and woman be kept from giving o their wealth on the ground that be cause they have acquired immensrickes, therefore such wealth wa accumulated dishonestly and if the give any money to colleges or church es, they will at once rob their employes or some one, in order tmake good the money they have giv en for charitable purposes?

The idea ought to be exploded b this time that because a man ha made money, even millions of dol lars, he has made it dishonestly of disreputably, and that every million nire is perforce a rascal.

The Astors, Rockefellers, Duke or any of the millionaires are a justly entitled to credit for th charitable bequests they make, a e men of smaller means. No is it just to accuse the Dak. brothers, nor any of the others whgive to colleges of evil motives, a does the writer of the paragraph quoted.

While too much that is given for charitable purposes is given ostensi bly, yet the world is daily witness ing millions of dollars given in bequests which are given in a sincere spirit, with the intention and hopthat mankind may be benefitted.

How contemptible is the belittling of any charity giving, for the love which prompts the millionaire to give of his great wealth can be just as pure as that which prompts the vertising. man of moderate means to give from his lesser store.

Both are entitled to credit, one as much as the other. The worl. needs givers, an I white charity need nct be puffed up, yet a just credit is due all givers, and the smirching of millionaires who give is as unjust as it is discreditable.

"I am called a clever man, so am a living contradiction of the idea that men of education and intelligence do not marry women aimilarly endowed," said a successful author recently. "That a clever woman does not make a good wife is one of the most ridiculous af falacies. There is nothing in life that a clever woman cannot and will not do better than a stupid one Education develops a woman's power in every direction and makes her more capable of directing a household and constructing a pudding than she would be without it. The educated woman who imperfectly performs her duties in life would not have fulfilled them better, but much worse, if her mind had re ceived no training. And the badly informed girl who cooks a good linner and mends her husband's socks would do both a great dea better if her powers of mind and of intelligence had been cultivated aubrought to bear on her daily work. -New York Advertiser.
