winding byways, you pass cloaked fig-ures, whispering at the iron bound win-dows. They are the lovers of Seville, polando la pava (plucking the turkey), as they call it. With the lattice slightly as they call it. With the lattice slightly open, the fair Sevillana sits in her dark-ened chamber talking in whispered tones to the gallant without. The old folks, weary of the task of chaperonage, after looking the daughter in a room barred like a prison cell, have gone to bed, and for hours, sometimes the en-tire night, the affinced lovers look through the armiting into each other's through the grating into each other's eyes and whisper the nothings of love. It would seem cold comfort to a porthern swain, but the Spaniards say the iron bars are a necessary evil there in Spain. In Spain there are life and color and pletaresqueness everywhere, and you think the Spaniard was been to be

In the market one sces something of the life of the people. There the white-washed houses are outlined against the brilliant sky in rambling perspective, and the graceful tower of some parish church, its brown walls mose grown, its bright tiles shining, rise sharp and clear into the blue above. Dark maidens with rplosey hair and warm color in their glossy hair and warm color in their checks gaze idly from the miradores above upon the countless people in the streets below. The cobbler hammers and stitches in
