THE POLITICIAN'S VS. COMMUNITY INTERESTS.

To what extent and how far does the politician's interests join those of the community's, is being variously construed by those who have been placed in office.

The fact of many of our political offices being largely honorary, without special perquisites or salary, does not cause them to go begging, for there are always contingent affairs, connected with many of these offices which give to them a certain value, and the possession of them goes beyond the mere honorary part.

How far can the person elected go, and yet prove honest and true to his constituency, is a question that must assail every office holder, and upon his faithfulness to his trust depends very largely the interests of his community.

The political office holder has certain privileges of his own, yet his privileges are decidedly limited, and cannot conflict in any particular with the rights of those who have given him office.

The office holder very often acts in a manner that may appear most contradictory and at variance with his party, the interests of constituents and the welfare of his community. There must be reasons for such actions, and good ones, if such an office holder shall retain his political status and personal character.

Communities as a rule are too lenient. They suffer many abuses which arise from the political methods practiced upon them, when they should resent such abuses as they would the nuisances, which lead up to a pestilence, for political disturbances may lead to equally as disastrous results to a community's welfare and prosperity, as would an epidemic of disease.

The tendency in too many municipalities to place their elections chiefly upon a political basis, as are the National and State elections, is one serious cause of many municipal troubles. While there must be a political tinge to all elections, yet the municipal election least of all demands politics in it, but rather it demands business considerations to govern its nominations and the qualifications of its electors to office.

From this point of view, the politician and the community have the same interest in common. Practical administration, business and not sentiment, must guide those in charge of our municipal affairs, this course leading to the elimination of the politician, as a rule, giving in his stead the conservative administrator of municipal matters, who has the community's interests solely and alone in contemplation in all that he does.

It is, through the leniency of the people of a community that the politician is permitted to exercise too much power, until it becomes not a common interest of politician and his people, but an antagonism that is both unnecessary and harmful to every one.

Such errors of antagonisms may be easily avoided, and the community go forward in a progressive way, governed in a manner that preserves and serves the moral and material welfare of all, and destroys every sign and vestige of political enmity, which might otherwise prove inimical to the community's interests and future welfare.

Energy From Volcanic Heat.

The energy stored in the coal beds has rightly been referred back to the sun, and it is, no doubt, to the same source that we should ultimately attribute the heat developed at great depths below the surface of the earth. While it is believed that no practical attempt to utilize this subterranean heat have yet been carried into effect, there appears to be no good reason why the attempt should not be made, especially in volcanic regions, where quite high temperatures should be revealed at moderate depths. In a Colorado mining town an interesting combination was recently observed which a little ingenuity might have converted into a considerable source of power. Within twenty feet of each other were two springs, one of a temperature of nearly 200 degrees F., and the other not over 60, the flow of each being very uniform and the temperature quite constant. The theoretical efficiency might rapidly be determined from the well-known law of thermodynamics, and the use of one stream to vaporize and the other to condense some volatile liquid, such as ammonia or bisulphide of carbon, might enable a fair percentage of the energy to be utilized which is now running to waste. - Cassier's Magazine.

Driving Streams.

The appellate court of northern New York has recently handed down a decision of great importance to all people who are compelled to drive logs by water from the forest to the mill. By this decision the court hold in effect that no stream is a public highway for log driving unless it is navigable in its natural state. This will shut out many acres of forest land from their natural markets, as effectually as if there were no streams in that part of the State.

Until now the timbermen have relied on the ancient theory that no one can be prevented from passing from his own land to a public highway, even though to do so he was obliged to pass over the property of another. In their case this view was apparently strengthened by an old statute which declared certain streams to be public highways for driving logs. The decision we now refer to explodes this theory and practically declares the statute unconstitutional.

This decision will undoubtedly work hardship in many cases when the forest lands are beyond navigable streams or railroads; either the owners will be compelled to leave their forests untouched, or pay any price that may be demanded for the right of way to the nearest public highway. Of course this decision affects directly only the citizens of New York, but the decisions of the higher courts of the country are generally by all other courts throughout the land, and the question may come up at any moment in our Southern courts. - Ex.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound of imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SAVED FROM THE SURGEON'S KNIFE

P. P. P. Lippman's Great Remedy, Saves a Man From Becoming a Cripple.

Mr. ASA ARMOUR, a well-known citizen of Jacksonville, Florida, was afflicted by a terrible ulcer. Medical skill seemed unavailing in stopping the ravages of the terrible disease. The leg was swollen and intensely painful, as the ulcer had eaten its way down to the very bone. All medicines and treatments having failed to effect a cure, the doctors said the leg must come off. Just when it seemed that Mr. Armour would become a disabled and a crippled man, he tried P. P. P., Lippman's Great Remedy, and the result was wonderful.

P. P. P. SAVES HIS LEG.

"Jacksonville, Fla., July 1, 1897. - Two years ago I had the worst ulcer on my leg I ever saw. It had eaten down to the bone, and my whole leg below my knee, and my foot was swollen and inflamed. The bone was swollen and painful, and discharged a most offensive matter. My physicians said I had necrosis of the bone, and my leg would have to come off. At this stage I commenced to take P. P. P. and to bathe my leg with hot castile soap suds. It began to improve at once and healed rapidly, and is to-day a sound and useful leg. "I think P. P. P., Lippman's Great Remedy, is all a man could ask for as a blood purifier, as I have known it to cure so interrible cases of blood poisoning in a remarkably short time. "ASA ARMOUR."

TERRIBLE BLOOD POISON

The body covered with sores - two bottles of P. P. P. made a positive and permanent cure. This is only one of many thousand similar cases. Catarrh yields at once to P. P. P. That smothered feeling at night, that heavy feeling in the day - can and should be removed; P. P. P. will do it if you only give it a chance. Indigestion and constipation griping in the bowels, Headaches and total loss of appetite are the results. Regulate yourself and keep up your stomach with P. P. P.
