HERMITS OF GREECE.

RELIGIOUS RECLUSES WHO LIVED IN HOLES IN THE CLIFFS.

They Depended Wholly Upon Charity For Their Sustenance and Bemained Always In Their Aerial Caves—The Monnstery

One of the most curious scenes on the Thesealian frontier is to be found at Kalibaki, some 50 miles by rail above Trikhals. The town lies on a plain which is backed by the extraordinary rocks of Meteors, rising precipitously to a great height and commanding the marked attention of travelers. In places the cliffs ascend like a wall to a height of 3,000 feet. They are rough, free from verdure and disfigured by innumerable holes and caves all over their face. One of the most curious scenes on the

It is these caves and remains of monkish dwellings in them that give the rocks of Meteora the strange, almost prehistoric appearance that has made them famous.

There are several monasteries at Kalibaki. The largest is St. Stephen's. reached by a drawbridge thrown across a yawning chasm. This is one of the largest of the monasteries of Meteora and has a guest chamber especially fitted up for visitors—that is to say, there are three iron beds in it, and it is only convitous to symples that the weaded would soon have been a complete courteous to surmise that the wadded coverlet and single sheet that go to make up a Greek bed once were new.

The hegoumenos is most hospitable. He gives his visitors excellent monastic wine, a dinner of many weird courses and is himself very good company. As usual, there are two churches in this monastery, the smaller of the two possessing some very fair ikons set in beautifully carved frames, and one very old picture, dated 387.

The large church consists of a nave, antechapel, with the body of the church under the dome, which is decorated with the usual half length figure of Christ. Here are seen some of the in-laid ivory and mother of pearl stools and lecturns which at one time were the taple work of the Meteora monks.

All the manuscripts of any value have been removed to Athens. A long building at the right of the bridge contains the cells of the monks, which open into a dark covered corridor. In time of war these monasteries are used as places of refuge.

Not the least curious feature of these unique rocks of Meteora are the holes and caves which literally pepper th face of the cliffs in places.

In many cases these retreats of the hermits of St. Anthony are merel cages. At a distance they look, some of them, like big birdcages hung unagainst the face of the cliff. As dwell ings they are all exceedingly primitive.

The Thessalian hermit did not as much of life. A rocky floor to lie or bars or railings to keep him from falling out of his hole, a shaky ladde down which he might now and the descend to earth and a basket and strin to let down for supplies were all l needed in addition to his crucifix as other religious necessities.

These aerial caves were occupied the fourteenth century. Thousands bermits, judging from the remains habitations, must at one time or anoth have sought refuge in these cliffs. Fe of them can now be entered, for the ladders have for the most part falle away.

Seemingly the way a hermit procee ed was to choose a hole that took hi fancy. Up to this he ran a ladder. Then driving poles into the rock before th cave, he built out a little platform. This he roofed in and surrounded with wall made of sticks or dried gras From one platform to another the anchorites ran up their ladders until the whole face of the rock was alive wi these bermits of Et. Anthony. After the time honored fushion of a ligious recluses, the cliff dwelling he mits of St. Anthony depended who on charity for their sustensifice. Far in their airy caves they spent their day and nights in prayer and contemplatio When hungry or thirsty, they let dow their baskets to the ground, and who

The devout people of Kalibaki bethe devote people of Landau of the best that these hermits were a special charge upon them and kept them well supplied with bread and water. Every morning men, women and children could be seen tramping to the cliffs to fill the backets that were let down by the strings from above. And so the hermits were able to live their quiet, lazy lives without a single worldly care.—New York World.
