This is run in connection with the Normal school there.

RACE FOR GOLD.

Two Hundred Men Strive to Get There First. The Thermometer Thirty Degrees Below Zero.

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 16.—With the thermometer 30 degrees below zero, a midnight race over thirty five miles of rough mountain country in the heart of the Klondike has earned for George Draham, a logger, the prize of staking off his choice of overlooked and unregistered placer claims valued at $200,000.

Draham was at the Canadian register's office on the afternoon of November 15 when a man rushed in and filed a claim on French Pete creek, which adjoins the richest part of the Eldorado district. He had discovered that in the rush to stake off the Klondike district a bunch of five claims on French Pete creek had been overlooked.

Draham hastened to the register's office and getting a blanket and loaf of bread in his cabin, dashed off to the hills. Others had heard of the alluring prospect, and two hundred miners joined in the chase for the prize of staking off the remaining claims.

A wild and exciting scramble followed. Draham ran steadily seven hours and was first to stake off a claim, breaking all Klondike stampeding records. Three of his friends came next, and after them hundreds of other miners.

BADLY MIXED.

Senator Wolcott Does Not Succeed in Pleasing Either Side.

The President Said Not to be So Urgent as His Secretary. Reed Wants to Drop Finances. Inauguration Day. Seeds Free as Usual.

JOURNAL BUREAU, WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 17.

Senator Wolcott's speech, explaining the European trip of himself and his colleagues upon the international bimetallic Commission pleased neither the extreme gold men nor the extreme silver men. Both of these classes wished Senator Wolcott to acknowledge absolute failure and to admit that there was no use in hoping for international bimetallic, because it was a thing impossible of accomplishment. He did neither. He says the work of the Commission was not an absolute failure; that it isn't over, and that he expects it to have something substantial to show for its next effort. And he intimated quite plainly that President McKinley shared his views, in part, is not entirely. That is what those who are trying to force gold legislation at this session of Congress dislike the most. Hints have been dropped that President McKinley did not regard the need for gold legislation at this session as being so urgent as Secretary Gage and the representatives of the Monetary Conference, who have been much in evidence by reason of their statements before the House Committee on Banking and Currency in favor of their bill, have made it apparent that they did.

Speaker Reed is said to have been convinced sometime ago of the impossibility of important currency legislation at this session, and to have said that it would be an impossibility to construct a bill that six of the leading members of his party in the House would agree upon in all its details. He is also credited with having advised that financial agitation be dropped as far as possible for the remainder of the session. That is much easier said than done, now that the extremes of all the parties have got under a full head of steam. There is bound to be financial talk.

Some day it is likely that Presidents of the U. S. will be inaugurated on April 30th, when there is much more probability of good weather than there is on March 4th. For some years past, a joint resolution proposing the amendment to the Constitution, necessary to the change has been offered in each Congress, and every time inauguration day is cold, wet and disagreeable, as so many of them have been, the sentiment in favor of the change increases. It is bound, sooner or later, to become strong enough to win.

Senator Hoar has offered the usual joint resolution. It provides for the extension of the term of President McKinley and of the Fifty-sixth Congress to April 30th, 1901, and, of the extension of the term of such Senators as would otherwise expire on March 4th, 1901, to the same date. The change would add nearly two months to the short session of Congress, which has more than once been too short to transact the necessary business.

The House had the usual annual report over the Appropriation for the free distribution of seeds by the Department of Agriculture, with the usual result; the making of the Appropriation.
