THE EMPEROR WORSTED.

A Plucky Little Bungarian Girl Got Re

The present kaiser would probably not admit that he had often been thwarted in any of his plans, but an anecdote has recently become known which shows that he at least once "got the worst of it," and it is all the more piquant from the fact that he was defeated by a girl.

When the kaiser, who was then Prince Wilhelm, was about 10 years old, he and Prince Heinrich spent some time at Cassel with their tutors, who sometimes allowed the little princes to play with other children. One day when several of them were gathered together it chanced that a little French girl was among the number, and the young Ger-mans conceived the brilliant idea of making her a representative of the country they all so cordially hated. The delightful plan was immediately put into execution, and the poor child was tied to a tree. Then began a fusillade of pine cones, sticks, etc., and whenever anything struck her there was a cry of "Here's for Sedan!" This went on for a few minutes, when a little Hungarian girl, Helena von D-, who was watching, could bear the injustice no longer, and, singling out Prince Wilhelm as chief offender, she threw herself on him. The attack being unexpected, he was completely taken by surprise and fell down, whereupon she began to pound him, crying out at each blow, "Here's for Sadowa!"

The prince was fast getting the worst of it, for his little adversary was thoroughly in earnest, when the imperial utors, hearing the noise, rushed up and separated the combatants. After that the princes were more carefully watched, and Wilhelm had no opportunity to 'get even" with the little champion of justice. Some days afterward, hearing that the princes were leaving, Helena went down to the gate to see them go by. As they passed Wilhelm spied his foe, and leaning out behind his tutor he stuck out his tongue.

Helena was the daughter of titled parents, and later she was married to an Englishman. When the kaiser was in London, she told this story to one of his gentlemen in waiting, who in turn repeated it to his majesty. The latter exclaimed: "Is that devil of a girl here now? I would like to see her." A meet-ing was arranged, but Helena became ill, and so they never met after that one encounter to make friends or renew hostilities.-New York Tribune.

A SAVAGE CRITICISM.

The Teacher's Artistic Cleverness ceived a Hard and Cruel Blow.

In one of the Cleveland public schoolrooms of the primary grade the teacher has been reading Longfellow's "Hiawatha" to her pupils. Of course this is a rather ambitions work for the little ones, says The Plain Dealer, but they enjoy it, and the rhythm seems particularly pleasing to them. When they come to a hard word, the teacher goes to the blackboard and draws a picture to illustrate its meaning. This the pupils find highly entertaining, and it belps in quite a remarkable way to fix the text in their minds. A few days ago they came to this line in the early part of the poem: At the door on summer evenings sat the little Hiawatha.

"At-th' door on sum-mer eve-nings sat th' lit-tle"—read the children.
"Go on," said the teacher.

But they couldn't go on. The name of Hiawatha was too much for them. They knew who Hiawatha was, but they didn't recognize his name. So the teacher went to the board and took con siderable pains in drawing:

First.-A wigwam with poles stick ing up above it, and a rude aboriginal drawing above it, and a rude aboriginal

Second. - Little Hiawatha, with feath-

Third.—A fine harvest moon

Then she pointed at Hiawatha and There was a general craning of necks and shaking of heads.

"Come, come," said the teacher
"you know what that is."
Then one little girl spoke up: "I guess it's a mud turtle." And instantly, with one accord, the

JOHN KEATS.

A Poet's Gentle Life That Was Termi

In the days of Keats, Hampstead and Highgate were still capable of baving an individuality of their own and of teeming with interesting associations. Part of their celebrity arises from those associations thus formed. Leigh Hunt, visiting those scenes before his death, would point to the wooden seat where he and Keats or he and Shelley sat when such a poem was recited or to the path through the fields where Coleridge took leave of him and Charles Lamb, who would stutter some witticism at parting. John Kents was born in Moorsfield. London, 1795, and at the age of 15 was left an orphan, when he entered upon a five years' apprenticeship in a surgeon apothecary shop at Edmonton. From his youth he showed a passion for music and poetry and spent all his leisure moments in poring over books. After reading "The Faerie Oncene" be would talk of nothing but Spenser. He learned whole passages by heart, which be would repeat and dwell upon with costasies of delight. His first poetical composition, written at the age of 17, was entitled "In Imitation of Spenser." From that time it seemed that Keats lived only to read poetry and to write it. He luxuriated in the thoughts of poets, talked about them and read them to his friends.

Before Keats' apprenticeship was over it was evident that he would not persevere in becoming a surgeon. At 20 he entered a hospital as a student, but soon gave it up and found more con-genial society with Leigh Hunt, Shelley, Goodwin, Haydon and others, Keats signalized his accession to this literary group by publishing in 1817 a small volume of poems. Hunt describes him at this time as being under medium height, with shoulders very broad for his size. His face, strongly cut, yet deli-cately mobile, denoted determination and sensitiveness. His entire expression was of eager power, and he plainly showed his emotions. Wordsworth alone he seemed to look upon as a sublimity among contemporary poets.

In 1817 he left London to lead a quiet, thoughtful and busy life on the isle of Wight, returning a year later with four books of his "Endymion" completed. In 1820 he was seized with the fatal malady, the knowledge of which had been his fearful secret for some years. After a few mouths, during which he seemed partly to fight with death as there breathed his last at Rome, February, 1821, at the age of 25. He had wished for "ten years of poetic life," but not half that term had been allowed him. Crowded into his short life was much of interest with his ambitions, his high ideals and his talents, and had be lived the ordinary age of man many think that he would have been one of the greatest poets.-Exchange.
