Thought the Conductor Shot an Angel.

An engineer running over the Pan-handle branch of the Santa Fe is some what superstitious and believes in warnings.

One night he was rolling along at a good rate of speed, when he saw a clear, white light, like a will-o'-the-wisp, dancing around just over the track a few hundred feet in front of him. He shut off steam and came to a stop as quickly as he could. The conductor and train crew came running up to the engine to see what was the matter.

"There is some one swinging a lantern across the track," said the engineer, and the crew went ahead to investigate.

"We can't find any one," reported the rear brakeman, and the engineer pulled out again, but he went slowly, and in a few minutes he stopped again. The crew went ahead once more to see what was the cause of the light. The conductor, who was a good shot, drew his revolver and at the second shot he made at the mysterious light there was a crash, a scream and the light went out and something white came fluttering down from the clouds.

The superstitious engineer was scared. "You've shot an angel, sure," he said to the conductor, with his face pale as death.

Investigation brought out the fact that a small boy with a lantern tied to the tail of his kite was the cause of it all, but it teased the engineer to say anything about "shooting-angels."—Topeka State Journal.

Living on the Limits.

"Nine-tenths of our surroundings are superficial," said the observant man. "The government feeds its soldiers and sailors on 80 cents a day. Just think of that! As for household goods, let me tell you. There is a man who does odd jobs around our house, and the other day he informed my wife that he was going to move and gave her his new address.

"About 8 o'clock I was strolling along the street when I met my man and his wife and their 14-year-old boy. The man had a clock under his right arm, a picture in his left hand and a roll of bedclothing strapped on his back. His wife carried a large basket filled with crockery and a small roll of carpet. The boy brought up the rear with two chairs and a dishpan. I followed on the corner, and presently they came along with more chairs, a collection of pots and pans, and the man carried a table on his head. The third load comprised another basket, probably containing kitchen utensils, more chairs, broom, oil can, baby's chair and a bag of flour. The man told my wife that he had to borrow a pushcart to move his stove and bedstead.

Somewhere in the late seventies another Russian, but this time a savant, gave a proof of what long a rapid intensity of purpose will carry a man to. In order to make good his theory that a suicide may be deliberate and unrepentant he subjected himself to hideous tortures, ending in death, but under such circumstances that he might have relinquished his design at any stage of its progress. He lay on his back upon a bedstead from which he had stripped all the clothing, with a lamp placed underneath him so that the flame just touched his spine, rising at intervals to make notes, which were afterward published. They show a calm spirit of research and are slightly triumphant in tone, though touched upon high relief once or twice by an expression of anguish.—F. Foster in North American Review.

Feeble Men.

There is a condition possible to some few souls that is really the highest attribute of humanity would be chosen by most men of noble mold were selection possible. It is the unwarmed tranquility, the absolute inability to fear, that some men, not many, possess, or rather, one should say, by which some men are possessed. An instance of such courage on a low plane is that of Potemkin kicking aside the bloody head of his predecessor as he stepped to the block, an act almost indelicate enough to be humorous, yet without significant of an iron nerve.

TERRIBLE BREAKING OUT

CURED BY CUTICURA

I was afflicted with a terrible breaking out. I was treated by the very best physicians, who pronounced it blood poison, but it got worse. I was suffering almost agony, and finally had to give up work. CUTICURA REMEDY was suggested, which I immediately procured. From the first, I experienced a soothing relief, notwithstanding my intense pain. I improved rapidly, and in a few days I was able to do anything but ever been the matter with me. M. B. BASTIEN, 156 W. Hunter St., Atlanta, Ga.

Queer Funeral Mistakes in Maine.

There have been some queer mistakes made of all kinds, but this is one of the most unusual and undesirable, although no real harm was done: A man, one time prominent in professional life of this city, died. He was a member of a certain society in this city, which sent representatives to the funeral. The members of the organization were notified of the death of their fellow member by postal cards sent out by the secretary. One of the cards was addressed to and delivered at the late residence of the dead member, inviting him to attend his own obsequies.

A similar incident was, if anything, worse. A member of a secret society died and his fellows were notified of his death and the time and place of the funeral, as usual. A card was delivered at the address of the dead man, directed to him in his own handwriting. He had been the secretary of the organization and had addressed sets of postal cards to the members at his leisure. When a member died, a set of the addressed cards were sent to the printer, who printed the name of the deceased member on the back with the other matter used in the notice. So when the secretary died his assistant or successor sent a set of the cards to the printer, so that the dead man was sent one addressed by his own hand.—Portland Express.

A Long One.

A man well known in State street circles found himself in front of what he supposed was his Back Bay residence late one evening recently. He had a great many dollars' worth of wine under his waistcoat and could not gain entrance through the medium of his latchkey. Becoming enraged, in a drunken fashion, he kicked the door, broke the glass and used language that is unfit for publication. Finally the door was opened, and the owner of the house, who is athletic and irascible, proceeded to kick the State street financier into the middle of the street.

"Wasser you—hic—mean—hic?" inquired the assaulted party indignantly as he sat upon the curbstone and held his throbbing head with both hands.

"And what do you mean by trying to break into my house?" inquired the other man.

"Your—hic—house!" exclaimed the State street man in bewilderment.

"How—hic—long—hic—your lived—hic—here?"

"For four years," was the answer.

"Holy smoke—hic!" exclaimed the financier. "Have I—hic—been drank—hic—as long as that?"—Boston Traveller.

Quaint Fashions in Manila.

Gen. of the earth and open sea. Manila, that in its lap and on its breast hath gathered beauties all the loveliest, on which the sun smiles in his majesty, and so on. The quadrin, with an unimportant modification, is from Batavia. It sounds fine and rings false. Manila used to be regarded as the most fortunately situated city in the world. Just why is a problem. Set beneath a torrid sky, remote from the routes of commerce, it has squatted, unheeded and practically unheeded, the capital of a stretch of unfortunate isles. Visitors have been infrequent. The earliest was Magellan. The most pertinent has been the typhoon. The most pertinent has been the typhoon. The most pertinent has been the typhoon.

Victoria and John Brown.

"Pol Maner" is a favorite cast near Balmoral castle and was always held as the special preserve of the late John Brown, her majesty's personal attendant. John was an enthusiastic and inveterate fisher, and often the royal larder was indebted to his prowess for its supplies of spring salmon when the rods of the other fishermen failed to bring them to the bank. It is authentically reported among anglers on Deeside that when the queen wanted John he was immediately at her call, except when angling, and at such times she studied not to disturb him. The tacit understanding between them is said to have arisen in the following fashion: Her majesty one day sent an imperative message to the river side, desiring John to immediately wait upon her.

"Tell her majesty," replied John, in his usual droll, "that I am rinning a salmon and I canna come."

The messenger came back to him in hot haste saying that the queen desired to see him this very minute.

"Well, tell her majesty this time that I am rinning a salmon and I rinna come," and that settled it.—Pearson's Weekly.

When Molten Lead Won't Burn.

When the Prince of Wales was studying under Sir Lyon Playfair in Edinburgh, that gentleman, after taking the precaution to make him wash his hands with ammonia to get rid of any grease that might be on them, said:

"Now, sir, if you have faith in science you will plunge your right hand into that caldron of boiling lead and laide it out into the cold water which is standing by."

"Are you serious?" asked the pupil.

"Perfectly," was the reply.

"If you tell me to do it, I will," said the prince.

"I do tell you," rejoined Playfair, and the prince immediately ladled out the burning liquid with perfect impunity.—London Standard.

A Jealous Feat.

A wonderful feat in dancing is recorded from Berlin. At a recent ball a prize of a gold ring was offered to the lady who waltzed the longest without stopping. Twelve couples competed. They began waltzing at 12:30 a. m. and at 2:45 a. m. before the winner and her partner stopped waltzing. By 2:30 five couples dropped out, and at 5:15 another lady fainted. Two more couples dropped out at 4:45, and at 4:50 only two couples remained on the floor.

The Supreme Tenor.

Louis Gallot, a French musician, presented himself at the director's room at the Grand Opera in Paris one evening during the administration of Eugene Ritt. The latter was a great stickler for the dignity of the place and remarked as the visitor took off his topcoat that he was not in evening dress.

"Yes, my dear director," returned Gallot, "I am come just as I was. So very much pressed. However, I have not had time to cross the theatre."

"Ah," Ritt sighed, "but on the stage of the Opera one ought always to be in evening dress."

"Nevertheless," Gallot answered lightly, "I just now saw Jean de Roskoe very stylish, no doubt, but in a frock coat—a frock coat!"

"Yes, yes, no doubt, but—but—he is a tenor!"—Exchange.
