The Inland Voyagers.

All the warm flux from ocean to coast, the inland voyagers, the Great Lakes, the St. Lawrence, the Ottawa, the Saguenay, the St. Charles, and the Little St. Lawrence, while the (the One) is filled with cargoes of iron, steel, and other goods, making it a fitting vessel for the carrying of food and for furnishing boiling water for tea and coffee. It was so smooth and beautiful that I seemed to be mistaking something more when I chipped off pieces of its lining, but I knew they would be valuable souvenirs, and the uneasy, bustling water would soon amend the deficiency.

The Small Pools on the Plain.

The small pools on the plain are the most dangerous, for they spot hot and discolored out of the earth. Coming upon them in one direction they are not seen, and many a visitor has gone home with a scalded foot. The hydraulic display is now very useful, as inconsiderate tourists have injured the sporting fountain by loading stones into them to see them cast out, so you must take your time and wait for the water to be thrown out of the fountain. The Great Geyser had not spotted for a week when we were there, and such surtles indicated a near activity. The water spotted unusually high when it finally erupted, 120 feet, and showed all the tints of the rainbow, majestic at the same time and mysterious. It played for 15 minutes, and then 15 beautiful cascades subsided in feathery mist, a refined and graceful withdrawal.—International.

One Way of Settling It.

An amusing comedy in real life is reported from Paris. A married man was in a cafe near the Opera with his better half one evening and left her for a few moments. The lady rose and went to her seat and met her husband. The latter re-entered the cafe in order to chastise the offender. The latter, however, had gone, but the husband found his name and address. The man was a card printer. The irate husband went to this person's place, but he did not find him at home, so he left his card with the chief shopman, saying, "Your employer will know what I mean."

How We Walk.

In the Literary Digest appears a translation of a review of "Comment on Marche" ("How We Walk"), the latest book on the subject by Messrs. Reigault and Raoul. In this work it is claimed that we have been wrongly educated in walking and that the erect posture is a firm step that we have been led to believe were evidences of health and strength are conventional and vicious. Mr. Marey, who wrote the introduction to the volume, says that there is a style of walking that enables one, without excessive fatigue, to go distances of from 30 to 35 miles in a third of the time usually required. This may be accomplished by walking with the knees bent and the body inclined forward, a method which has been observed in professional pedestrians, mountaineers, peasants, hunters and soldiers fatigued by long marches. In not adopting this method, it is claimed that, as with all the other acts of life, we remain slaves of conventional aesthetics.

He Knows How Adam Fell.

A young man was recently taken to a hospital and suffered the removal of a rib. When he came to himself, he was told what had been done and seemed satisfied. Shortly after he dropped into a comatose state and kept calling for "the woman." For two days he was delirious, and frequently called for "the woman." "I want to see the woman," he kept saying. At last the nurse in desperation said, "Well, I'm the woman." The man looked at her critically from top to toe and said, "Who would have thought that they could have made such a pretty girl out of one of my ribs." And then he settled back on his pillow, and when he awoke again he was in his right mind and was better.—Kennebec Journal.

The Simple Blind Duke.

The Duke of Wellington was largely endowed with that modesty or simplicity which makes a great man almost unacquainted of his greatness. He met a lady friend, who was going to see a model of the battle of Waterloo, and a writer in the Cornhill Magazine, and remarked to her: "Ah, you're going to see Waterloo. It's a very good model. I was at the battle, you know." Surveying a field of battle he could detect almost at a glance the weak points in the disposition of the commanding forces, but he could never tell whether his dinner was cooked well or ill.

The German Fire Department.

"I have the honor to announce, captain, that the fire is in the fourth story, and our ladders and hose will reach only to the second." "Indeed? Then we'll have to wait till the fire gets down to the second."—Flegende Blätter.

The Sycamore Tree.

The sycamore has been called the Egyptian fig tree. The date of its being planted in England is not known, but it was very early. Henry, queen of Scots, brought over from France a young sycamore, which she planted in the garden of Holyrood, and from this have sprung all the beautiful groves of sycamores now to be seen in Scotland.

Decidedly against it.

"Are you in favor of this open door policy we hear so much about these days?" "No, sir, not by a jugful, with the cold weather coming on!"

Two Point-4 Questions Answered.

What is the use of making a better article than your competitor if you can not get a better price for it? Ans.—As there is no difference in the price the public will buy only the better, so that while our profits may be smaller on a single sale they will be much greater in the aggregate.

How can you get the public to know your make is the best? If both articles are brought prominently before the public both are certain to be tried and the public will very quickly pass judgment on them and use only the better one.

This explains the large sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The people have been using it for years and have found that it can always be depended upon. They may occasionally take up with some fashionable novelty but when they return to the one remedy that they know to be reliable, and for coughs, colds and croup there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.
