It is put one side to see if other better poems will growd it out. The next is a story. The first page is promising, but the sec-cond abows a coarse strain, and the read-

INSECTS AS HOODOOS. They Keep Settlers Away From Many Parts of the World.

Nothing could more strikingly illustrate the importance of small things than the large role which is now attributed to the mosquito in the etiology of some of the most serious and widespread diseases to which the human race is subject. It is truly said that what prevents the successful colonization of nany tropical countries and what throws the greatest obstacle in the way of civilization of and good government in vast regions of central Africa is not elimate, not distance from home and not unfriendliness on the part of the natives. The obstacle is malaria, and now we find that the prevalence of malaria, so far as man is concerned, de-pends on the mosquito, and that this pestilent little insect, in addition to irritating and annoying, is the means by which the poison of malaria is propa gated and distributed.

For years back botanists have known the important part played by birds in the scattering of seed and of insects in the distribution of the pollen of plants, and it seems not unlikely that natbologists will have to recognize in a much larger degree than has till lately been done the large part taken by the subordinate forms of life by which we are ded-our cattle, our horses, our dogs and cats, our flies, our mosquitoes, and perhaps even our fleas-in dis tributing disease from man to man, and, as is stated in regard to the mosquito and malaris, in deciding whether the extension of our empire over great areas of the globe's surface shall be possible or not.-Hospital.

OUR JAWS NEED EXERCISE.

Lack of Mastleation Causes Dyspepsis and Teeth Troubles.

Mastication is rupidly becoming a lost art, and, although we have become hardened to the fact that three-fourths of the dyspepsia is due to this cause, it might surprise some of us to know that the early decay of the teeth and diseases of the gams are occasioned by this same lack of maxillary exercise.

A disease of the gums, called Rigg's disease, which is every day becoming more common, is caused almost entirely by the want of proper mastication Twenty-five years ago this trouble was not considered of any importance , by the dentist on account of its rare occur

Today it is given more care than the decay of the teeth, as be is frequently consulted by patients who have a full set of natural teeth which are quite loose in the jaw. Aside from this they are sound and healthy, and after a certain development in the disease nothing can done to help them.

By lack of exercise the blood which should nourish both the bones and the gums is not carried to the part, nor does the blood carry sufficient material to the teeth; hence the enamel formed is defective, and early decay results. Fre-quently, too, the mechanical development of the jaw is arrested by this same want of motion. Most of the food among the better class of people today is cooked so as to require very little mastication, and the consequence is that the muscles have become flabby, the jaws slender and the sees for the attachment of the nuscles almost obliterated .- Boston
