did the mischief was not the only one to periah. Fifty bouses were wrecked, and the number of people who were killed was not known.

In one house among the 50 a mother had put her lishy into its cradle to sleep before the explosion occurred. What became of the mother no one ever know, but what became of the baby was very widely known.

The next morning there was found upon the leads of the Church of All Hallows a young child in a cradle, baby and cradle being entirely unin jured by the explosion that had lifted both to such a giddy beight.

It was never learned who the child was, but she was adopted by a gentleman of the parish and grew to womanhood. She must surely all her life have had a peculiar interest in that church.

A recent Siberian traveler relates:
"At Sadonak in the intensety cold nights the silence was sometimes broken by a lond report as of a cannon. This was the bursting of one of the ice bubbles in the river, a phenomenon I had neither heard nor read of before. The streams coming down from the hills were frozen on the surface some six to nine inches thick. The water brueath flowed faster than it could escape, and the pressure, on the principal of a hydranlic press, became irresistible. First, the clasticity of the ice was seen by the rising of circular mounds from six to eight feet in diameter and from four to five feet high. The bursting four to five feet high. The bursting point came at last with a report like an explosion. The water escaped, but soon froze again. I have seen scores of these ice hillocks in a few versts of the

When the British forces were marching to Peking in 1800, after the capture of the Takn forts, one of the rivers became so awollen with the heavy rains that it was rendered almost Impassable. While in this quandary a bright idea suddenly struck one of our officers. Being well aware that the Chinese generally order their coffins years in advance and keep them on the premises and also that they are perfectly stright, he consulted with his brother officers, with the result that orders were given to search all the houses of the village and collect every coffin. With the sid of a few empty cases the soldlers construct.

Manix. few empty casks the soldlers constructed a pontoon bridge of coffine sufficiently strong to bear the artillery, and the river was thus passed in safety.
