STAGE FRIGHT FATAL

MANY CASES WHERE IT BROUGHT DEATH TO THE VICTIM.

The Attention is Not Confined to Rehearsals Before the Footlights, but Has Been Known to Attack Players of Rehearsals.

"Of all the many ills to which the actor is liable," said an old physician who has a large clientele of actors, "the worst is stage fright. This is nothing less than a species of nervous disease, induced by the nervous thread that one's performance may not be successful. This naturally attacks beginners more often than old players, and yet instances are by no means isolated where death has been brought about through its evil, even in the case of old timers."

"Perhaps, however, the most peculiar instance of all was that of the veteran performer who had gone through 30 years of stage work without experiencing this malady. One night, however, he confided to a fellow player that a quite unaccountable nervousness had suddenly taken hold of him and that he did not think he could ever act again."

"His comrade laughed at the notion and urged him to go on, as usual, but his apprehensions may well be conceived when the poor old player, without vain efforts to speak, fell back and expired. The doctor who made the post mortem examination stated that death was due to failure of the heart's action, evidently induced by the presence of an attack of stage fright."

"Death is by no means an infrequent end to the trouble, and more than one case in my own practice has ended fatally. It is not always detected who suffers the most, either, for I recall one case some years ago where a young woman whose heart I knew to be perfectly normal made her professional debut in this city. While standing in the wings awaiting her first cue she was seized with an attack of stage fright and trembled violently."

"Not till she heard the line spoken which was her signal for recovery, did she make any effort at recovery, and then, to the surprise of those who were trying to get her in shape, she braced up and went on the stage as though she had been on the boards for years. She went through her part mechanically and without apparent consciousness of her actions, but she played the scene better than she had done at rehearsal."

"At the close of her scene she came out of the stage, staggered to her dressing room, and sank unconscious to the floor. She never recovered from her coma, and an autopsy developed the fact that she had died of heart disease, though I had examined her shortly before and could find no trace of cardiac affection."

"Several standard authorities quote the case of a young English aspirant who came to the theater on the night of his debut in a state bordering on nervous prostration. He was backed up on brandy and given encouragement by those on the stage with him, but no sooner had he stepped upon the stage than he clapped his hand upon his heart, and fell dead. The excitement had ruptured the valves of his heart, and he had ended his career as he was about to begin it."

"One curious case was told me not long ago by one of the physicians at Bloomsdale. A young man, a member of a college dramatic club, was brought there for treatment. He had been cast for a part in the spring production, and this extra study, added to the regular studies imposed by the collegiate course, caused something to give way. On the occasion of the dress rehearsal it was found that he could not remember a line of his part, and this so worried him that he broke down and was brought here."

"For several weeks he could not speak an intelligent sentence, and then suddenly his part came back to him, and he could go through it, cues and all, without a break. For another full week he kept going through the lines of his part, and then developed a severe attack of brain fever, from which he came out perfectly rational, but, oddly enough, with absolutely no memory of the lines of the play in question."

"The excitement caused by stage fright is a most curious thing, and did the opportunity present, I should like to write a treatise on the subject, for it is a fascinating one, but I am kept too busy patching up the troubles that exist to write of the troubles which have existed."—New York Telegraph.

Oh, the Pain of Rheumatism!

Rheumatism often causes the most intense suffering. Many have been vainly sought relief from this disabling disease, and are to-day worse off than ever. Rheumatism is a blood disease, and Swift's Specific is the only cure, because it is the only remedy which can reach such deep-seated disease.

A few years ago I was taken with inflammatory Rheumatism, which became so intense that I was for weeks unable to walk. I tried several prominent physicians and took their remedies, but I was unable to get the slightest relief. In fact, my condition seemed to grow worse, the disease spread over my entire body, and from November to March I suffered agony. I tried many patent remedies, but some relief came upon the advice of a friend I decided to try Swift's Specific. I had my first bottle, and I was cured completely. The cure was permanent for I have never since had a touch of Rheumatism, though many times exposed to damp and cold weather.

B. S. A. Before allowing me to take it, however, my physician, who was a chemist, made experiments with doctors'—their potash and mercury. I felt so much better after taking two bottles, that I purchased the remedy, and in two months I was cured completely. The cure was permanent for I have never since had a touch of Rheumatism, though many times exposed to damp and cold weather.

Will Fowlerton Avenue, Philadelphia.

Don't suffer longer with Rheumatism. Throw aside your oils and liniments, as they will not reach your trouble. Don't experiment with doctors'—their potash and mercury will add to your disability and completely destroy your digestion.
