read somewhere that the American In-dians had straight hair. The hair of the one who waited on us curis like natrakhan."—Chicago Tribuna. DESTROYED BY FOOL PRIENDS. In the midst of the rejoicing over Admiral Dewey's home coming, and the Married With a Bump.

The marriage customs of the Negulos are peculiar. The young man who seeks a bride first obtains the favor of her parents and their pursues her, catching her in his arms. She break not runs and cost not viold until celebration of his splendid victories in the Philippines, there is the dally disgusting spectacle of the wordy newspaper fights over the merits and demerits entching her in his arms. She breaks loose and runs and does not yield until he has caught her several times. Finally be leads her in triumph to her home. Here her father drags the youth up a ladder to her floor of their hut. The mother drags up the maiden. They are then made to kneel, and the father pours over them a cocoanut shellful of water. He then bumps their heads together, and the coremony is completed. They spend their honeymood in the depths of the mountain and for five days and nights are lost of Admirals Sampson and Schley.

If there were ever two unfortunale men, who had fallen completely into the hands of fool friends, these American Admira's are the two.

The result of these recriminations has been to overshedow the great victory at Santiago, and instead of celebrating that victory as was Manila, the tiresome and senseless trash of fake Interviews, false doings and impossible sayings of these to everyday life.

There is another marriage cus two men are published in newspapers which know their falsity.

These fool friends have not merely kept Schley and Sampson from receiving due and fair recognition for their services, but they have by their efforts of trying to down each other, kept both their own favorite back, and presented any just reward or recognition being paid the gallant captains of the warships who assisted in defeating Cervera's

Sampson, Schley, Clarke, Philip, Evans, Wainwright and the rest, together with the men behind the guns who sank Cervera's fleet, or assisted in the fight, all deserved and would have been given an ovation by the American people, except for the fool friends of the two Admirals.

As it is a hardship has been done sli the men, officers and crews, for not being given due credit for their magnificent behavior at Santiago, all on account of mischievous bickerings and attempts to hoist Schley over Sampson, or Sampson over Schley.

It is a splendid filustration of being in the hands of feel friends, and the bad results of such a position.

AN INDIAN DETECTIVE

Arkichita, a typical Indian, was chief scout at Puri Sasston Dakota, in 1982. Although he knew English well, he hold the old Indian hatred of its uss. extraorditary circumstances. He stood about five feet nine inches in height, was sleader, but why, and was about 84 years of age. Ordinarily he was slow and sedate in his actions—very dignified; but when the necessity areas he could be as quick as a flash, and had, like every Indian on the northrestero plains, a pair of eyes that could oppal any fieldglass. His services for he had been eff-ployed as a scout for some years—had een very valuable to the govern from the war department to proquently he went around to a neat uniform with chevrous and stripes, vary much impressed with his own impor-tance, which he considered second only to that of the commanding officer; and tance, which he considered second only to that of the commanding officer; and he took care that erary one else also should respect his rank and dignity.

As his native name is the Slour for "soldier," it is enaily seen why he was so named; but he had still another name, which the Indians had given him before his entering military circles, and that, translated into English, was the "grasswalker," or "trailer," from his absolutely marvelous ability to find the trail of anything that left even the alightest trace on the ground as it passed over it.

A desperate soldier named Brice broke jall one night and was pursued the following morning. The trail led to the west for a trifle over a mile; then it turned north for a quarter of a mil and we followed until we came to a tree at the edge of a slongh to the northwest of the fort, called the "gar-den bar slough." Here Arkichita point-ed under the tree and said Brice had inin down there to rest.

The trail here led into the slough. A Dakota "slough" is a shallow lake, the water of which is from six inches to three feet deep, with a soft, muddy bottom, but not generally miry. The center of the slough is usually free from grasses or weeks, but along the edges, from 20 to 60 yards out, long tule grass grows.

This particular slough was a mile long and varied from an eighth to a quarter of a mile in width, and there was a foot of water covering as much soft mud. During the night the wind and rolled the water up considerably. It seemed hardly possible to track anything through it, except where the tule had been broken down. Where that was the case, even I could follow the trail; on reaching open water, however, the case was different.

The eastern end of the slough reached to a point near the fort not more than 150 yards from a brickyard, on which was a kiln that had been built during the summer. The kiln was now ready

Once I thought Arkichita was baffled, Once I thought Arkichita was baffled, after all; he had come to a dead standstill near the tule. Then an inspiration struck me; perhaps by a circle I could find the trail. Happy thought! I put it into immediate execution and found one. Rather elated at my success, I called, "Come quick; heap trail!" He came over, took one look; just the suggestion of a smile played on his face as he said, "Cow."

as he said, "Cow,"
I did no more trailing, but understood what was bothering him. The post herd also had waded through here since Brice's escape, and it took all the scout's endless patience and wonderful eyesight to keep the traff where the cattle had passed through it. The grass stem was of no use here.

We had pessed over half the slough in this circuitous route, when sudden-ity Arkichita started, straight as the crow flies, for the edge of the slough uear the brickkiln. Was he following crow files, for the edge-of the slough near the brickkiln. Was he following the trail?

On he went until he came to the shore nearest the kiln; here he stopped, avidently bothered again. There was a acarcely discernible footprint in the mind and water right at the edge of the slough, apparently the last step the deserter had taken before reaching hard ground. This footprint showed the toes, so the deserter was now harefooted. Another thing about this print was its direction; it stood at right angles to the line previously followed. Either the man und taken a sideward spring for the land from his right foot, or be had turned around and started back over his own trail.

Arkichita went down on his knees and inapected the grats, blade by blade, I kept a respectful distance at one side, astonished at the turn the affair had taken. Now inch by inch, on his knees, he wrenched the secret from the apparently unwilling surface of the earth. Elighty pards from the kiln, he hoosed up and gianced at it. The same idea cytdently instantly occurred to both of us. The trail was leading to the kiln! Then he rose, and, bending over, alowly advanced to the edge of the brickyard.

After reaching the pard, Arkichita walked showly around the outer edge of the engling the grand with the atmost care, until he came to the point from which he started, when he said. Trail come in—too go out; man kill.

HOW A BULLET TRAVELS.

and therefore when about this distance from the enemy soldiers are instructed to fix bayonets, in order to counterat the excessive elevation of their sim.

The recruit learns that the mean catreme range of the bullet is 3,500 yards, and that the longest shot ever observed was 3,760 yards. He is taught the penetrating power of his weapon, a subject full of interest. To take one or two examples, rammed earth gives less protection than loose; bullets easily find their way through joints of walls, while a concentrated fire of about 150 rounds at 200 yards will breach a nine inch brick wall.

Only experience can teach a soldier how much he must aim to the right or left of his mark to counteract the force of the wind. A side wind has more effect on the flight of the bullet than a wind blowing directly toward the firer.
The soldier must learn the habits of his rifle, since some shoot higher or lower

Do you know that a railway track has an odor? The fact was learned from a blind man who was walking with a friend amid strange surroundings in Westchester county hat week.

"Is a train coming?" he asked.

"Why do you sak?" his friend inquired, for, though there was a railway track a few hundred feet ahead of them there was not the alightest sound to indicate its presence.

"I smell the rails." he answered. He did smell them, and though his friend's nose was not nearly so sensitive, he could with his head within an inch of the rails detect an odor like that from slightly heated fron filings.—New
