THE SNARL OF THE JACKALS. The jackal is an animal of the ger deg, yet possessing none of the decent traits of the dog.

The jackal lives in the ground, travels in company of its own fellows, feeds on refuse, carrion or live food, if is can find an animal weak or wounded, for the jackal goes by night and makes up in atrectious howls for the courage it attacking the helpless or wounded, simply because there may be attacked through treachery, when if they were in their normal condition, they would receive the fawnings of the creatures, who attack them when cast down.

The recent disasters to the British armies in South Africa, has brought to light the jackals, represented by foreign nations and a class of sycophant news present, so these jackals begin their enarlings, the same taking form in expressions of hope that the Greatest Nation on Earth may be broken up.

If England was any other nation but England, there might be the shadow of a chance for its overthrow.

Only a few months ago and these foreign jackals were gloating over this country's possible everthrow by Spain, and rejoicing in and magnifying every Spanish success.

But since the war, these once suarlers have become fawners, fearful of the United States, and attempting by over done politeness to cover up the treacherous utterances of a few months ago.

Let those Americans who sentimental ly take sides with England's exemies, not forget that it was only last year when this same English nation atood beside the United States, and by its presence cent the foreign jackal nations back to their holes in the ground.

Let it not be forgotten that England and the United States are bound together not merely by the tie of Angio-Saxoniam, but by laws, trade and language, and that any calemity to John Bull is a calamity to his kinsman, Uncle

While the sky way be cloudy today over the British people, it is only a cloud which will be dissipated, and the great Kingdom and Empire will come forth to confound its enomics and receive the congratulations of its friends, while the jackals will smeak back to their holes, to

"Why did they do it, did you ask? To save money. The public is very well saited with their pump as it stands, and it is doubtful if they could get any more for it with my improvement added. Such a step would merely cut down the net profit, so they prefer to let well enough alone. It was necessary, of course, to get my invention safely shelved, or it might have been taken up by some enterprising rival, and the only earthly reason for spending $500 on the thing was to put it out of the way. It was rather rough on me, to be sure, but the experience was valuable, and I won't get caught that way again."—New Orleans Times Democrat.

GLASSES FOR THE EYES.

The Reason They are Worn by So Many Persons Nowadays.

The question is often asked, partientarly by those who can recall the customs and experiences of 25 years ago. "Why do so many persons nowadays wear glasses?" The answer is easy. "The increase in the number of spectacles worn is not to be regarded as an evidence of modern degeneration of the eyes, but rather that a long felt necessity has been met." For it should be remembered that within the past quarter of a century much has been learned about the value of glasses, and the range of their application and usefulness has been enormously extended. Of course the eyes need more help now than formerly, as the amount of work they are required to do is mach greater than at any previous period in the world's history. The sewing machine and many other inventious of its class save the labor of the hands only to add to that required of the eyes.

New employments, new amusements and new fashions are continually being introduced to increase the exactions faid upon these sensitive and delicate organs. The steady decrease of illiteracy, together with the general cheapness of literature and a spread of a tarte for it, the enormous circulation of novel, magnaine and newspaper, the eyer tocreasing use of artificial literalized, all combine to overtax the cress and to weaken or possibly destroy the sight unless the required allo every means at one disposal. Thus it happens that the some time tuxmy of properly adapted glasses has come to
