The drug shop had not yet become a distinct institution. It was usually a branch of the grocery or spice business. In 1647 one Giles Forman of Boston had, however, firmly established himself as devoting special attention to pharmacy. In 1846 the first distinctive drug store in America was opened in Boston by William Davies. No doubt more reliance was placed on drugs then than now, when people are beginning to recognise the large part that fresh sir, dietetics and other hygienic measures play in the successful treatment of disease.—Lippincott's Magazine. ures play in the successful tr disease.—Lippincott's Magaz

when Longfellow Came to Cambridge.
In 1886, when Lowell was a sophomore, Mr. Longfellow came to Cambridge, a young man, to begin his long and valuable life in the college. His presence there proved a benediction and I might say, marks an epoch in the history of Harvard. In the first place, he was fresh from Europe, and he gave the best possible stimulus to the budding interest in German literature. In the second place, he came from Bowdoin college, and in those days it was a very good thing for a Harvard undergraduate to know that there were people not head in Cambridge quite as well read, as intelligent, as elegant and accomplished as any Harvard graduate. In the third place, Longfellow, though he was so young ranked aircady distinctly as a man of letters.

Almost swarybody has observed the strange characteristic of the water lily bud opening its petals as sunrise and closing them again at somest. It was for this reason mainly that the ancients held the water lily sacred to the son. Pliny says: "It is reported that in the Euphrates the flower of the lotter plunges into the water at night, remaining them till midnight, and to such a depth that it cannot be reached with the hand. After midnight it begins gradually to rise, and as the sun rises above the horizon the flower also rises above the water, argunds and raises itself some distance above the element in which is grown." It was also through this pocularity that Hancarville proved that the Egyptians considered the lily as emblem of the world as it rose from the waters of the deep.—Pittsburg Dispatch The Water Lily.

Miss Skidar had a trying experience. In order that the artist might get the proper set of the garments in water and the right atmosphere and aqueous effects, she had to lie in a large bath filled with water, which was kept at an even temperature by iamps placed beneath. One day, just as the picture was nearly finished, the lamps went beneath. One day, just as the picture was nearly finished, the lamps went out unnotteed by the artist, who was so intensely absorbed in his work that he thought of nothing else, and the poor lady was kept floating in the cold water till she was nearly benumbed. She herself never complained of this, but the result was that she contracted a severe cold, and her father, an ane-tioneer at Oxford, wrote to Millais, threatening him with an action of £50 damages for his carelessness. Millais paid the doctor's bill, and Miss Siddal, quickly recovering, was none the worse for her cold bath.—Life of Sir John Milials.

They Are Drended by Guests and Make the Hostess Nervous, Writing on "Making Company Guests," Edward Bok, in The Ladies' Home Journal, considers "it a curious fact that American housewives are so loath to believe that a dinner with fuss and feathers is drended by the vast majority of people. The highest compliment we can possibly show a guest at dinner is to let him partake of an ordingry meal, to let him come quietly in and 'be one of the family,' yet this is the very compliment which we with-hold from him. Instead of giving a five him what he really enjoys lenst.

"Let a hosters be ever so graceful and tactful, let there be years of experience on her shoulders, yet nothing can concent from her guests that the dioner which she is serving is other than an unusual one. It is a formal affair, and no amount of grace can make anything else of it, for nothing speaks so loudly or so unerringly as a formal company dinner. Every course shows it; every movement of the waitress proclaims it; every piece of china fairly really enjoys it. The guest certainly does not, because he knows he is being made company of, and that feeling is always enough to offset every enjoyment. The heatess does not, for she sasn't the time. Her eyes are for the table and her servants, not for her
