IS THE COUNTRY EQUAL TO THE TESTS ?

Under the obligations growing out o the War with Spain, the United States is, and will be subjected to tests, which are certain to both test the character of our statesmen and the individuality of the nation.

Shall the American people prove themselves equal to these tests, is an important question, and one which should not be left to partisan politic-

The Porte Rican tariff bill is one of the tests, and it is to be seriously doubted if this measure, as passed by the House, is proving to be a wise

A too great faith in destiny, must not be regarded as good statesmanship, but rather that plainer sense of what is right, what is duty, should prove the more correct guide.

The opportunities growing out of the war with Spain, of commerce, of civilization, of the advancement of the social and moral conditions of new people who have come under the direct and positive influence of America, are matters which demand solution at the hands of the American people.

The right and justice, which at times seem to get lost in our own home affairs, always triumph at last, and so will they in determining our treatment as a nation with the people coming under this country's influence, protection or rule, growing out of the Spanish war.

But there must be times when the administration of these new affairs must test the American character, and it will be well if each test shall be met with wisdem, deliberation and honesty of purpose, and not be met by political considerations, which at the best are biased. if not governed by prejudice.

The faith that destiny will make it all right in the end is not enough, for the end may not be happily consummated, unless the sease of justice and duty shall direct that each trial shall be honestly met, and the test be one which shall not leave a stain upon this nation and its people.

The American people have the character to meet their obligations as a great World nation, and no temporary political makeshifts should pervert the honest intentions from being fully carried out in dealing with our foreign affairs.

Although R. K. Munkittrick has an enviable reputation as a humorist, yet he is not the quickest man in the world to see a joke when it is played on himself. Mr. Gibson, one of the ditors of Puck and also a practical joker, arranged for a special jest to be administered to Mr. Munkittrick. He had provided a trick telephot which emitted a shower of flour when anybody spoke into it.

When Mr. Munkittrick had arrived, it was suddenly discovered that the paper had gone to press and that his copy was too late. There was only chance, Mr. Gibson said, and that was to telephone to the printer and tell him to stop the press matter should be set up and inserted. He asked Mr. Munkittrick to go to the

The Parisian Way. It must be hard for the untravele Anglo-Saxon to grasp the idea that a poet can without loss of prestige recite his lines in a public cafe before a mixed audience. If such doubting souls could, however, be present at one of these noctes ambrosianæ, they would quickly realize that the Latin ament can throw a grace and childish abandon around an act that would cause an Englishman or an American to appear supremely ridiculous. One's taste or sense of fitness is never shocked. It seems the most natural thing in the world to be sitting there with your glass of beer before you while som rising poet whose name ten years later may figure among the "Immortal For-ty" recites to you his loves and his with a description of some humble here or martyr.—Eliot Gregory in Scrib-

She Heard It. The surpliced choir had done its duty for the evening service. But all during the church hours there had been a peculiar sound outside as if a child wer crying. In reality it was something the matter with the organ. It could be heard distinctly in the auditorium of the church. When the choir sang the donal and marched slowly out of the church into the dressing rooms, one of the young ladies among the sopranos asked the woman who take care of the robes:

"Did you hear that awful aqueaking out here?"
"Yes, indeed, mum; I could almost understand the words."

And nothing more was said on the subject.—Detroit Free Press. We have saved many doctor bills since we began using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in our home. We keep a bottle open all the time and whenever any of open all the time and whenever any of my family or myself begin to eatch cold we begin to use the Cough Remedy, and as a result we never have to send away for a doctor and locure a large doctor bill, for Chamberialo's Cough Remedy never falls to cure.
