opened by British military officers, which was undertaken by the House committee on Foreigh Affairs, was an amusing theris.

Macrum had absolutely nothing to beek up the charge, except his unconcealed prejudice against everything British, and his cross-examination made it plain that the whole thing was authenge more than a bast case of rattles on his part, which began with the war in South Africa and which he has not yet been able to sinke off entirely. It is fortunate for the country that a man of his calibre was not sercusted with any important work.
