ABUSE OF SENATORIAL CANDIDATES SHOULD END.

The Senatorial fight now going on in North Carolina, is developing cunning, and every kind of political ingenuity among the followers of the candidates.

These efforts in behalf of favorite candidates are all right, provided their promoters keep constantly in mind that every candidate, Carr, Waddell, Jarvis and Simmons, is a man of irreproachable party reputation, and to cast reproach, to attempt to dishonor an opponent in this contest, by any deed or word, which shall impugn the political integrity of a candidate means that the Democratic party of North Carolina is dishonest in its organization, and untrue among its members.

The fact of this dishonesty would be in strict evidence, if the friends of any candidate should accuse and, raise that an opponent was not fighting squarely upon Democratic lines.

In a contest, especially a political one, it is not to be supposed that any delicacy of manners is to be used towards an opponent, and yet in this Senatorial contest, in which every candidate for nomination is an acknowledged strict party man, and the fight is within the ranks of the Democratic party, there is a certain courtesy which cannot rightly be denied any candidate.

Messrs. Jarvis and Waddell are candidates seemingly without press agents, who can keep their constituents or followers fully advised on the situation each day.

Messrs. Simmons and Carr on the other hand seem well provided with news agents, who keep in perfect touch with the situation, and keep the public fully advised as to the particular doings of each.

The disadvantage of Messrs. Waddell and Jarvis in this way is perfectly apparent. They are helpless to quickly correct the reports of an opponent which may be sent out, and their answers must come, only after a report is a day or more old.

Here are two candidates in a measure defenceless.

A report can be sent out, that one or both of them have withdrawn from the contest, and before it can be contradicted many voters will see it and read, and perhaps never learn differently, and thus have their votes diverted.

This was done a few days ago not in a direct statement, but by an insinuation that Messrs. Jarvis and Waddell would withdraw from the race by October 15th.

This is not merely doing these gentlemen an injury in their candidacy, but it discredits them as starting in a Senatorial race to be used as a cat's paw for some other candidate.

If there is to be any political "Monkeying" of this kind in the present Senatorial race, it is not merely discredit-able to the candidates, but it is a severe reflection on the party which will endorse a candidate using such methods.

Let the Senatorial contest be a hot one, but let no Democrat forget that the fight is among brethren of the same political faith, and therefore let no abuse enter into it.

Dr. W. H. Lewis, Lawrenceville, Va., writes, "I am using Kodol Dyspepsia Cure in my practice among severe cases of indigestion and find it an admirable remedy." Many hundreds of physicians depend upon the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure in stomach troubles. It digests what you eat, and allows you to eat all the good food you need, providing you do not overload your stomach. Gives instant relief and permanent cure. F. S. Duffy.

THE SECRET SERVICE.

Visiting Work of Reading a Cipher Dispatch of 2,000 Words.
Some governments make use of numerals for their ciphered communications with their agents abroad, others a mixture of numerals and words, and yet others exclusively words. Of course, the only problem that needs solution in dispatches of this kind is to ascertain the key number or key word. When that is accomplished, the remainder is easy, though generally very tedious. Indeed it is difficult to conceive of a more tiresome, head splitting piece of work than either to cipher or decipher a dispatch of some 1,500 or 2,000 words. The writer talks from sad and weary experience.

Some governments change the key word or key numerals with each dispatch, according to a settled arrangement. Others, again, change it every month. Sometimes it is placed at the beginning of the dispatch, at other times at the end. To the uninitiated a dispatch of this kind will appear in the nature of a Chinese puzzle, but to an expert cryptographer the deciphering of a government code dispatch is mere child's play.

Occasionally the dispatch will appear a mere jumble of consonants without any meaning, while at other times it will be so ciphered as to contain sensible and plausible sentences, the meaning of which appears on the surface. It was a code of this kind that was used by the Spanish secret agents in this country during the war with Spain, and the clever staff of secret service men employed by the United States government were in a very short time possessed of a key to the cipher in question.—New York Tribune.

A KAFFIR "SMOKER."

The Native Women Are Enthusiastic Devotees of the Weed.

In South Africa the native women smoke incessantly. Your native servant smokes as she cooks and as she washes. The tobacco she likes is rank. The dainty cigarette an English or Russian lady of fashion enjoys, smoked through a quill, so that no nicotine can stain either teeth or fingers, would be sneered at by a Kaffir. "Give me a pipe and something in it I can taste," is in effect what she says.

The men Kaffirs are beyond tobacco. They smoke something so vehement that it makes them cough and splutter, loses their breath, chokes and sneezes to an alarming degree. They like snuff, too, and are fond of offering and taking pinches of it ("schiff") they call it when they meet and visit one another.

Regarding tobacco as too mild for their taste, the Kaffirs take another weed and smoke that. They proceed to arrange a smoking party, by squatting on the ground and getting ready their "pipe," a cow horn with a thin tube in it inserted half way down at right angles to the horn. The end of the tube is in a basin, and it is from it that the smoker sucks the strong stuff that makes him incapable of anything but a series of coughs and chokes for some time after he has had his turn at the pipe, which is passed around from man to man, until a perfect chorus of coughs rends the air.

The tobacco the Boers smoke looks like poor tea and is peculiar in flavor, yet Englishmen who have become used to it acquire such a taste for it that they never ask for any other kind.—London Mail.

Relics of Former Ages.

The big tree of California is unique in the world. It is the largest, oldest and most majestically graceful of all trees. Scarcely known tree species, it is the best living representative of a former geologic age. It has come down through the ages simply by reason of its superb powers of defense against hostile conditions. The bark is sometimes as much as two feet thick and is almost noncombustible. The oldest specimen felled are still sound at the heart. Yet, with all its advantages, the big trees do not seem to have increased their range since the glacial epoch.—Washington Post.

Not His.

The drill instructor's face turned scarlet with rage as he rated a raw Irish recruit for his awkwardness.

"Now, Rafferty, you'll spoll the line with those feet. Draw them back instantly, man, and get them in line!" Rafferty's dignity was hurt.

"Please sergeant," he drawled submissively, "they're not mine; they're Micky Doolan's, in the rear rank!"

A Green Hand.

He was a new freight handler. "Load those barrels in that car," ordered the freight agent.

"Oh can't load barrels in that car, nor," responded the new man.

"Why not?"

"It's a box car, nor."—Chicago News.

The Adirondack mountains embrace an area of over 2,500,000 acres, and in this area fully 800 mountain peaks rise to altitudes ranging from 1,200 to 5,000 feet.

Few things are impossible in themselves. It is not so much means as perseverance that is wanting to bring them to a successful issue.

MADE HER FORTUNE.

Boarding House Steaks That Grew Tender Under a Four-Ton Hammer.

"Spendings of luck," said a reminiscent resident of a New York town, came to a boarding house keeper in a small town where I once lived. There came to the house when he first struck the town a new millhand. This boarder seemed at first just like any other young man with a good appetite, and of whom the profit to be made was likely to be small, but it was speedily discovered that he was a man of ability and promise, who was likely to get on at the mill. He made great progress at the works. It wasn't long before he was at the head of the section of the forge department there, the boss, in fact, of the four ton hammer.

"As far as he was concerned the only thing that worried his happiness was the toughness of the steaks they had at the boarding house, and that they were tough nobody could deny. But he was equal to the occasion there as he had proved himself to be at the mill."

"Madam," he said one day to the landlady, "if you will let me take the steaks you buy before you cook them I will make them just as tender as can be without any cost to you whatsoever."

"Now, he had paid his board regularly, and he was at that moment virtually the star boarder. The landlady handed him the best meat without hesitation the bundle of steaks just as it came from the butcher, and the hammer boss just took 'em over to the mill, this being before the regular starting time in the morning, and adjusting one of the four ton hammers to the right gauge, started it up and ran the steaks a couple of times under the hammer.

"Good? Why, they were just simply beautiful, and every morning after that the general hammer boss used to run across to the mill before breakfast and quietly, without the knowledge of any one, run the landlady's steaks back and forth over the four ton hammer. The fumes of the landlady's tender steaks grew rapidly, and did also, naturally, the number of her boarders. And so she accumulated wealth."—New York Sun.

HOW TURKS EAT.

They Use No Tables, Chairs, Knives, Forks or Plates.

The Turks use no tables in their homes, and chairs are unknown, says London Answers. Instead there is a huge wooden frame built in the middle of the room, about 18 inches high, and when the family assembles to dine cushions are brought, placed upon the frame, and on these the members seat themselves, tailor fashion, forming a circle around a large tray which occupies the center.

The tray is a very large wooden, plated or silver affair, according to the social and financial condition of the family, and thereon is deposited a capacious bowl. About it are ranged saucers of sliced cheese, anchovies, caviare and assortments of all sorts. Interpersed with these are gobslets of sherbet, pieces of hot unleavened bread and a number of boxwood spoons, with which to drink the soup.

Knives, forks and plates do not figure in the service, but each one has a napkin spread upon his knees, and every one, armed with a spoon, helps himself.

When this is consumed, the bowl is borne away, and another great dish takes its place. This time it is a conglomeration of substantial, all stewed up together, such as mutton, game or poultry. "The mess has been divided by the cook into small portions, which are dipped up with the aid of a spoon or with the fingers."

For the host to fish out of the mess a wing or leg of a fowl and present it to a guest is considered a great compliment, and for a Turk of high degree to roll a morsel between his fingers and then put it into the mouth of a visitor is looked upon as the height of favor and good manners.

A Dry Wanted.

Our comal in Birmingham says that several years ago one of the Harbors of threadmaking fame, told him that the discoverer of a fast black dye for linen thread could command his own price. Examine the thread holding the buttons in men's clothing, and you will see that after a short time the black disappears, and even new linen thread has not sufficient depth of color. It is impossible to find in the English shops men's black cotton socks with tops at all elastic. The fast black dye for cotton was the discovery of an English chemist. English hose manufacturers would not at first buy his secret, but the Germans did and built up a trade all over the world.—New York Times.

Mutual Recognition.

"Bless my soul!" explained the man with the iron gray beard, cordially extending his hand. "Ain't you the tow-headed boy that used to worry the life out of me 25 years ago, back in old Chenango county, by climbing my orchard fence and stealing my apples?"

"If you're the infernally mean and stingy old hunk who owned that orchard and used to set your dog on any boy who came within half a mile of it, I am," replied the younger man, grasping the proffered hand and shaking it heartily.—Chicago Tribune.

To Be Content.

"Young man," said the editor to the budding journalist who brought him a column story which could have been told better in ten lines, "when a man discovers his house is ablaze he doesn't go to the window and tell the passers-by that 'half an hour ago what threatened to be a terrible conflagration broke out in the upper part of the plateland mansion occupied by Mr. Farnsworth Dickson.' He simply rushes to the front and shouts 'Fire!' Be content, young man."

Outing.

Outing for October will interest every body. It is "A Treason of Nature," Charles G. D. Roberts enters into hunting from the Moore's rather than the hunter's point of view, depicting its defiant lordship, its passions, and its un-doing. "The Place of the Automobile as a Sport Factor," is the absorbing question of the day. "Coursing on Western Prairies," breathes the atmosphere of one of the most popular sports of the West. "The Development of the American Trotter" is naturally interesting in connection with the modern speedway development.

Charles F. Holder defends the maligned man-eating shark and satisfactorily proves that "Big sharks as Game" provide a mighty fund of sport. Sport royal too, for anglers is in "Up the Ristigouche for Salmon."

With the opening of the season of that great game—"Oleage Football Twenty-five Years Ago," by a Princeton graduate of that era will be an entertaining prelude.

"The adventures of Marco Polo," the greatest traveler the world has ever seen, are of special interest in the October Outing. He lived in China more than seven hundred years ago, and his striking story is Outing is from the pen of Dr. E. L. Holden.
