QUALIFICATIONS DEMANDED IN A SENATOR.

In considering a choice for United States Senator, which must be done at the primary on November 6th, the people of North Carolina should demand a fitness in their man, and that the man to be selected by the people's vote on the first Tuesday in November, shall have qualifications of citizenship that shall entitle him to fall recognition as a wo:thy representative of the Old North State when sent to the Capitol of the Nation.

There are personal attributes which can make a candidate the choice of many

But in naming a man for such an exalted position of honor and trust, the people of North Carolina have something more to consider than personal attributes.

If the people of this State had to name the man of greatest generosity. they would not hesitate to say, Julian S.

If the man was to be mentioned who had stood longest and remained the staunchest friend of his comrades, the Confederate Veteraus, Julian S. Carr would be named at once.

But it is pot slone in such qualifications, noble se they are, that the voters of North Carolins are satisfied to rest

FREAKS OF THE WIND.

Strange Things Done by Sea Breezes
That Pungle Old Sallers.
Those persons whose lives are passed on the sea witness many strange peanles of the wind, and sometimes it seems as though it goes perfectly mad.

As a rule, a breeze is steady, but often in summer weather by the sea you will notice ruffling the water two strips of wind within a few yards of each other running in opposite directions. Then, again, a breeze will fear along, cutting the water up till it runs full tilt into a stronger breeze coming the other way stronger breeze coming the other way and will be overthrown by it. Then the two join and tear back over the path of the first one.

When this happens on a strong, windy day, as it sometimes does in summer, the damage to shipping is terrific.

Two years ago it was blowing a fresh summer gale on the Maine coast. Suddenly a brig, which was running free, with the wind right behind her, came upon a wall of white water ahead, and the crew agw that a sudden shift of wind had crew saw that a sudden shift of wind had brought the gale right on top of them. The new wind, sweeping the other back, struck the ship full in the face, so to speak, and as she was lightly laden—"in ballast," as it is called—ahe was turned head over heels and made a back somersault. Then the masts gave way, and the brig filled and sank. Four of the crew rescued by a steamer which, though were rescaled by a steamer which, though she had been traveling at 11 miles an hour, was stopped almost dead by the change of wind. The gale had been blowing from the southwest when it ran into the other gale coming from the northeast. That freak of wind dismasted 12 ships and sank five, besides one or two pleas ure boats full of excursionists.

A rare and strange occurrence is the "ground wind" that blows hard along the surface, but fails altogether a little way up. Recently a large public sailing craft on the Pacific coast was tearing along with as much wind as she could stand, while a sailor 30 feet up the mast showed there was not enough wind there to blow out a little flag be was holding, though the wondering passengers on deek had hard work to keep their hats on. One or two of them, refusing to believe in the "freak," were allowed to climb up and see for themselves, and they, too, found there was hardly a breath of wind a few yards up the mast. It only happens in the height of summer, when winds are much more changeable and shifty than at any other time. You have heard perhaps of an "Irish man's hurricane," straight up and down the mast. This is slang for a dead calm but there really are such things—especially in hot weather and a cloudy sky-as strong squalls blowing straight down from the heavens strike the sea or earth like a falling board. This happened on the Atlantic not very long ago, a squall suddenly descending from a cloud-clouds al ways bring puffs of wind with them-and struck the sea like a smack from an an open hand. It astonished everybody siderably, for this is a "freak" generally confined to the tropics and very But the downward squall was unmistakable, for it forced two very deep loaded boats bodlly under water and nearly capsized a good many more. The same thing occurred near Llandudno, where several bathing tents were flattened out on the sand .- Cincinnati En

HOW ZULU WOMEN SEW.

They Use Skewere For Reedles and Girafe Stnews For Thread, The skill of the Zulus of South Africa In sewing fur is a household word in South Africa, and some of the other tribes compete with them. The needle employed is widely different from that used by the ordinary needlewomen. In the first place, it has no eye; in the ond, it is like a skewer, pointed at one end and thick at the other. The thread is not of cotton, but is made of the sinews of various animals, the best being made from the sinews in the neck of a giraffe. It is stiff, inelastic, with a great tendency to "kink" and tangle itself up with anything near it. Before being used it is steeped in hot water until it is quite soft and is then benten between two smooth stones, which causes it to sep-arate into filaments, which can thus be obtained of any length and thickness Thus the seamstress has a considerable amount of labor before she com ences with the real work in hand. Finally she squats on the groun for no native stands to work or do anything else who can possibly help it) and, taking her needle, bores two oles in the edges of the rug or garment on which she is working. The thread is then pushed through the butt of the needle, drawn tight, and two more holes are made with a like result, the skewer progressing very slowly, but fast enough for a country where time is of no value whatever. The skin upon which the seamstres is working is damped with water before she commences, and as the damp thread and hide dry out they bring the work very closely together.

His Sympathy.

An old housewife in the country was emoaning her poverty to an unsymnathetic busband.

"Things ain't as they used ter be," she complained. "Why, I ain't got anything like I used ter hev. I ain't got quilts enough ter go round the beds, there's two of the best chairs broken, an I ain't got no dress thet's really fit ter go ter meetin, an if I was ter die ternight 1 wouldn't hev a cap ter be buried in.

The old man had stood the whining is long as he could. "Blast It all, then," he fiercely ejaculated. "why didn't yer die when yer did hev a cap?" Fire and Mosquitoes. Italian peasants living in swampy re cious still follow the old custom of ighting fires for the purpose of purifying the air of malarial poison. As a matter of fact, this is the worst thing
