I believe the farmer is the one wh is most to blame for the exedus of the boy from the farm, says E. E. Rexford of thought, of progress, of new ideas. The time has gone by when farming can be carried on automatically. Old methods must be superseded by new ones which are in harmony with the progressive spirit of the times. These new tendencies are seen in all lines of life, and there is no reason why the farmer should remain in the old ruts. The boy feels this, and he would like to keep abreast with the times. He would do this if his father gave him any encouragement, but this he falls to He is kept in the background as much as possible in the planning of farm work and the management of the farm. Is it to be wondered at that he resents such treatment? He knows the possibilities of his nature, he feels himself equal to responsibilities, and the constant repression put upon his desires to do things in a new way and be something more than a machine to op-erate at the will of its owner galls and frets him until, finding he has no chance to assert his individuality, he rebels at the old life and leaves the farm. Nine out of every ten boys who do this would be content with farm life if it could be made more attractive to them. They would be willing to work, but want a chance to work in their own way-a way that has some thought and brains in it. They object to being treated as children after they are able to do a man's work. Let the farmer take his boys into his confidence and his council and treat them as he would ike to be treated by those above him n authority, and we would hear less bout the boys leaving the farm.

Modern Feeding. Feeding for mest or milk is not the inphazard, wasteful business it once was, says Texas Farm and Ranch ceders are after profits and have earned that they must study their business as they never did before, because some are doing so and to compete with some feeders it is necessary to study and adopt the truths that science and experimentation have shown to result in the greatest amount of clear profits. A few years ago all that was thought necessary for best results was a sufficiency of sound food. and little thought was given to nutritive rations. Science, aided and demonstrated by practice, has determined that certain food substances in certain proportions give certain results, and that certain other food substances in different proportions give the same results. Such facts as these bave opened a new field of thought to live stock raisers, by which they can adopt a cheaper combination than some other affording similar results, thus enhancing the profits of their business. The experiment stations have done a large amount of work in this field and many enterprising feeders have done the same. So that now feeding is conducted on scientific principles, and feeders are every year questioning science more closely, wanting more light. In dairying, perhaps, scientific eeding has been carried to its highest pitch, for, although feeding is not the only thing science has to do with in dairying, it is important and indispensable to good results. Successful feeders are interested readers. High Prices For Meat. The continued high prices for bee have caused many writers to crution against going too heavily into the cat-. Despite the "bul of all the figures, government and oth-erwise at hand, many a man has delfberately missed favorable opportunities to acquire cattle for fear that just as the increase came on to be sold be might be caught in the maelstrom of overproduction. What may happen to the commercial affairs of the country to affect the consumptive demand no man can foretell, says The Breeder's Gazette, but, so fer as the prebable supply is concerned, there seems to be unch truth in the following statement made by Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson at Canton. O., not long ago: "With regard to meat produc animals, the prices are high and will continue high because the people west of the Mississippi river who graze their stock on the range country have been destroying the grames so systematically that they are not able, in many of the states, now to maintain more than 50 per cent of the ment producing ani-mals found there a few years ago. The meats of the country in the future must be produced on the farms of the o'clock noon on Tuesdays and Fridays,

We believe that no small part of our farmers are "land poor," not in the sense that the term is often used, that carmers are "tand poor," not in the sense that the term is often used, that they have much land that does not produce enough to pay the taxes and loterest on the value—though some of them are even that badly off—but many have much mere land than they can outlivate as it should be and more than they can keep up near to its proper productive condition. They may use most of it in some way and think they get an income from it, but a large share of those who really make money at farming casks it upon but a serial part of the farm. A few acres of mendow must the bayen, the cerhard and the garden are producible. For the rest, if they said it or rested it to some one who, would put fertilizer and labor on it and produce as smedice one acre as is now produced on three, it would be more looking after the best possible results from small areas are what we need. When New York city owned a slave ship is told in an article in Pearson's Magazine. The greatest impetus was given to the slave trade by the act of parliament of 1684, which legalized slavery in the North American colonies. This does not mean that slavery was unknown in what is now the United States before that time, bewar landed and sold 20 African negroes at Jamestown, Va. In 1626 the West India company imported slaves from the West Indies to New York city, then New Amsterdam. The city itself owned shares in a slaveship, advanced money for its fitting out and shared in the profits of its voyages. This recognition and encouragement may account for the ast and ing fact that in 1750 slaves formed one-sixth of the cutire population of New York. The general prevalence of slavery is shown by the fact that at this time there were 67 slaves in New York's small suburb of Brooklyn, and that in London itself there were resident 20,000 slaves.

Slaves were at that time publicly dealt in on the London exchange. No wonder the traffic in human flesh was a recognized commerce, and that in 1771 the English alone sent to Africa 192 ships equipped for the trade and with a carrying capacity of 47,146 slaves per trip.

A Tricky Dog. Not long ago a very fat spaniel was introduced into the house where a fox terrier had always been the master. The latter was told, however, to behave well to the newcomer and not to bully him. So the two seemed fairly friendly and in the end got in the habit of taking short rambles together.

However, the fox terrier was evidently of a thoughtful disposition and on one occasion came across a bank, or wall, which was easy enough to leap off, but there was greater difficulty in returning. The fox terrier sprang down the bank and enticed his heavy companion to follow, with the read that the latter could not get back while the former, by reason of his greater activity, was easily able to do. Now the terrier saw his opportunity returned home and cruelly left his companion lamenting. Never did the former seem happier or gayer than on that day when he had once more the sole run of the house, and he sulked when later on the spaniel had been found, amisted up the wall and brought

Since then the fox terrier has repeatedly get the apantel down the same place, with the usual result, and seems to glory in his mischievous act. Wheth-er the "fat dog" will learn to avoid temptation to such a ramble remains to be seen. Buffalo News.

How "David Harum" Came to Re Written.

An interesting little anecdote is told about how "David Harum" came to be written. It is rather pathetic. It seems that Mr. Wescott, the author, was the kind of man who could do pretty much anything—paint a picture, plan a house or compose a sonata—but be had never made much money, so when he became ill and realised that he might not live long and would leave his family with little or no money he was desperate.

"Write a book," suggested a friend and neighbor to him me day when they were talking over the situation.

"I did make an attempt at it conce," answered Mr. Wescott. "I tried a love story, but I couldn't make it go.

"Add a little local color to it," said the first speaker. "Take one of the people about here that you know and work blan up—old——, for heatners," mentioning a character familiar to them both. "Red be first mis."

"That's a good ideaf" excluded Mr. Wescott, and the result of this conversation was "David Harum," and yet. "David" the more to the story at all as it was first conceived.—Anna Wentworth in Women's Home Companion. kind of man who could do pretty much
