NO CIVILIZED WARFARE.

There are a great many foolish things said and written in the criticism of nations which may be at war, and discussion over the methods pursued in conquering enemics.

The arrival of Oom Paul Kruger in France has produced a sensation among the mercurial French people, who if reports are to be believed are falling over the exile in their enthusiasm.

It is not that the French people are to be seriously considered in their emotional acts over Oom Paul, or that their expressions of good will mean anything, except a desire to be offensive towards the English, by applauding Kruger, and his utterances.

The French criticisms, as they listen to Kruger's descriptions of how the English are conducting their war against the Boers, is especially interesting just now, when taken in connection with the French conduct of their war in Madagascar.

Reports of how the French nation is fighting, is not of a character to arouse anything but horror, as those not killed, are made captive, especially the women, and divided among the French soldiers.

Ancient warfare was never "civilized" nor is it to be expected that modern war fare, no matter if so called Christian nations are engaged in it, is going to show any civilization, for wars cannot be fought without atrocities and excesses being committed.

The degree of atrocity and excess, will make one war differ from another, and seem to place one in the "civilized", the other in the "barbarous" class.

Atrocities and excesses will be found wanting when modern nations go to war against each other, while the contest between a modern nation and such people as the tribes in the Philippines, or the blacks in Africa, is certain to lead to excesses being committed.

A prolonged war will also lead to acts. which a short war would never see commaddened and indifferent to human life.

Many deeds are committed during a war, which appear unnecessarily inhuman to the outsider, when the conditions are such as to practically demand the committment of the acts.

Excuses cannot be made for many acts committed in war, neither can there be an absolute condemnation of a nation for every act committed by its soldiers in a conflict, and afterwards.

No war is civilized, neither can the results arising from it, while in progress and afterwards, come in any sense under the term of civilization.

WORRY AT DUSTOM HOUSES.

Wesses thould Know the Law Sefore They Travel Alene.

If there is one thing more than another which makes a woman wish that she had never been born under the stars and stripes, it is the annoyance and worry cutailed apon ber through the customs inspection when she returns from Europe for the first time.

The discomfort begins about the time the lightship is sighted—it may be the day previous. Everybody asks everybedy else for advice. Old travelers away experiences, harssning and disconcerting else for advice. Old travelers swap ex-periences, barassing and disconcerting the green traveler with grewsome tales of these ogres, the customs officials. Signing the declaration down the bay as to what is dutiable and what is not first introduces you to them. It is not a happy moment. You are not youracit. The tales of the old travelers—more aften the wide margin which they have left The tales of the old travelers—more often the wide margin which they have left for the tales unteld—have worked you into a state bordering on nervous frensy, and you are almost convinced that you yourself must be a real live "huspeet" for whom the authorities have long been looking.

There is so little definiteness to the law regulating clothing it is difficult to know regulating clothing it is difficult to know regulating clothing it is difficult to know whether or not you ought to declare old dresses bought in America four years ago and renovated in Paris, with the ad-dition of a little new trimming. Of course, it is presupposed that no portion of your dress has been utilized for storing away questionable articles. One regulation gives you your first help. Presents must be declared, no matter how small their value. The term is elastic, however, and does not need to include anything which can be used by yourself. Paying the duty on your presents settles the question.

Another secret of success lies in your smile. If you have traveled much on the continent and looked after your own bag-gage, you have learned the value of a distinctly feminine smile, bearing good will to man. It is a great lever and as useful in New York as abroad. Again, it is necessary that you be among the very first in signing your declaration, before the official is worn out by the idiotic and evasive answers of both men and women, for when the question comes of declaring nothing dutiable among one's baggage men as well as women are given to evasion. Once on the wharf the same rapidity must be used in getting your baggage to gether and then securing your inspector while he is still in a good humor. It is well to remember that this inspector uses his own judgment to a great extent. The thing is to make his judgment and your own agree. He looks you over and de cides what sort of clothing suits you and then examines your trunk to see whether you and its contents harmonize. If you have declared your presents you must show one or two of them and state the price of each. When the duty is paid, you walk off while the examinations are but just beginning .- New York Herald.

Menu of a Japanese Beauty. The satin skinned, almoud eyed flower of Japan is very fastidious about her food and does not suffer like her Caucasian sister from Indigestion. She begins in the morning when she awakes by eating two little green plums pickled in vinegar and rolled in sugar. A cup of ten completes this almost traditional breakfast of Japan. The dinner is of the drollest composition. It is brought in on tray of red lacquer in microscopic cup with covers and consists of a hashed sparrow, a stuffed prawn, seaweed with a sauce, a sait sweetmeat and a sugared

After all these dishes, which are a mere make believe, a wooden bowl is brought in, bound around with copper and filled to the very brim with rice plainly cooked in water. The flower of Japan fills another large bowl from it, darkens its snowy white surface with a black saure flavored with fish, mixes it all together, carries the bowl to her lips and crams down all the rice, shoveling it with her two chopsticks into her throat. And so ends the dinner.-Boston Gazette.

Shooting men are rapidly gaining a reputation for story-telling which rivals that of anglers. Here is a gunner's yarn that, to say the least, taxes one's credulity. He saw as flock of pigeons sitting on a branch of an old pine, so he fropped a ball into his gun and fired. The ball split a branch, which closed up and caught the toes af all the birds attting on it. He saw that he had got them all, so he fastened two balls together and fired; out the branch off, which fell into the river. He then waded in and brought it to the shore On counting them there were 300 pigeons.-Richmond Times.

Once when Mrs. Kendal was taking the role of Galatea in Dublin she had an amusing experience. Pygmalion, it will be remembered, had a jealous wife. During the temporary absence of that lady Galatea was about to throw herself into the arms of Pygmalion when an old dame in the audience cried warningly: "Don't do it, darlint! For variety and interest the Decem per number of The Smart Set ranks all previous issues of that smart magazine. It is not too much to say that the novelor," by Miriam Michelson, is the strong est short story that has been published in this country in recent years.

The second story in length is another of the series of brilliant society tales that Miss Caroline K. Duer is contributing to The Smart Set. It is entitled "An Unfinished Elopement, and deals with events at the Summer capital that came near to gaining sensational publicity.

Other features of this number of "the magazine of cleverness" are "The Epieods of the Earl," by Louis Evans Shipman, author of "D'Arcy of the Guarda; For Love of Lord Patrick," an intensely inferesting London story by Mrs. Poultney Bigelow; "Crowned with One Crest"a characteristica'ly vigorous story by Gertrade Atherton; "Lord and Lady Laddismeere," by Edgar Fawcett, and many feachating stories of far countries by Gilson Willets, Apnetta Halliday. Antona, Onoto Watanna and others. In this one number the reader may have a glimpse of the society of almost all of the great cities of the grorid.
