GORDON AT NEW ORLEANS.

The Southern Industrial Convention held an important four days' session in New Orleans, beginning December 4, and great interest was taken in its proceedings by the people throughout the southern states. Many prominent men spoke, among them General John B Gordon of Georgia and the following were the closing words of his fine speech:

"The southern people want no more, any confined, contracted public policy. We want the great canal, that shall link the eastern and western oceans. We want the open door and a big one at that.

"I believe, and I stand here to predict—whatever may be considered wise policy—that the day is coming, and it is not far distant, when, from Porto Rico, and from Cuba, and from the far off islands of the Pacific, there shall come from the throats of the redeemed millions a gladsome hosana, praising God for the American flag and the hope which it shall bring of American freedom. Let us move onward. Let us turn our hands to handcraft and convert a bale of cotton, not into the value of $40 or $50, but into products worth $400 or $500. We have already gone beyond the highest notch reached before the war, from 4,000,000 to 11,000,000 bales. Suppose it had all been converted into fabrics here in the south, and had gone through the open door into the orient, what would have been the condition of this people? Every bale of cotton raised on southern soil ought to be woven and spun on southern soil. If we spun one-half of it you would not be bothered with 5 cent cotton. You would have a balance wheel to regulate your price then.

"Go on, my countrymen. Georgia is moving. We are building cotton factories. Where do we get the money? Out of our own pockets. Every dollar is subscribed at home. Don't you know that that means prosperity? If Arkansas and Texas and these other great southern states would prosper they will not wait for Georgia to get into line, but will get into line with Georgia. Then we will be the richest people on earth. God Almighty reigns, and he is at work, doing wonders for his people in this fair southland.

"You felt, when slavery fell, that there had been sounded the death knell to your prosperity. It was a staggering blow. The freedom of the black did bring about the temporary improvement of the white race. But it's coming all right. When the very air thrills and trembles with the music of your great progress, then will come the solution of the problem of the races. It's just before you, and I bid you, Onward, Onward! I can see in the distance the great benefits to us from the open door, and expansion of commerce. Let us not to be contented without giving tenfold what we do now. We have the simple but we have something behindthis—freedom liberty, the best government that the world has ever seen, and a civilization. And I want to see that old-time southern civilization perpetuated until the last trump shall sound. That is the civilization which gave us Washington, Patrick Henry, old Zach Taylor, and all the mighty heroes of our land. I want to see it live and thrive—that civilization which produced the knightliest manhood on earth, and the most glorious womanhood. Let us send it to beautify and ennoble and uplift the humanity of the earth, to carry progress to them, to hold up to them the banner of law and order, and above it all let us float the pure, spotless white banner of the prince of peace."

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save you life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. L. S. Huss of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite. Try it. Only 50 cents. Guaranteed For sale by C. D. Bradham, druggist.

BRAVE IN THE RANKS.

But as an Officer This Young Man Was a Decided Failure.

"Most good officers would make excellent soldiers," murmured the old staff officer, "but all brave soldiers would not make fine officers—no, not by a big sight!"

The time was just after supper, but the old soldier lay back with one leg thrown over the arm of his easy chair and his face almost hidden behind the cigar smoke. The light, turned down, threw the dim, uncertain shadows of a misty past about the room. Battalions of shadows chased each other over the walls, and through the cigar smoke charging squadrons rushed batteries placed high upon the ceiling. It was the time for a story. Both the colonel and his Boswell recognized that.

"I was thinking of a child I knew in Longstreet's corps," said the colonel simply. "He was just 15 and a chap to be proud of. Longstreet saw him about the second fight. The general had ridden to the front, and there far ahead of the line was the boy. He was about the size of a woodtick, but he made enough noise for a brass band. The men were crouching and hiding behind cover, but to see that lad you would not have thought there was a tree or a rock in a hundred miles. Every time his gun went off it would almost knock him over. Then he would rub his shoulder, all the while jumping up and down and shouting: 'Give 'em lead, boys! Give 'em lead!'

"Well, that time 'we give 'em lead,' and in the charge the boy was the first one over the breastworks. His commander was overjoyed to see it. After the fight the general sent for the youngster. The lad came and stood at attention before his officer as straight as you please. General Longstreet complimented him on his bravery. Then he said, 'And why are you fighting, my son?'

"'Why, to be an officer, of course, sir,' replied the little hero.

"'All right. I'll make you a lieutenant.'

"In a week not an officer in the army could strut like the new lieutenant.

"Then we had another fight. The bullets began to whistle and to sing, and the new lieutenant showed signs of nervousness. He did not shout 'Give 'em lead' this time, but looked all white and scared. Of a sudden he dropped his sword. Right before General Longstreet's eyes the boy soldier ran away.

"The general summoned him after the battle. The lieutenant came, fearful and penitent.

"'Do you know I should have shot you, sir?' thundered the officer.

"'Yes, sir,' replied the boy. 'I don't know why I did it, but I just ran. I couldn't help it, sir. Shoot me if you want to, or give me my gun and I'll win my straps again.'

"For a minute the general stared at his impudence, then said, 'I'll do it.'

"In the next fight I was at the front with Longstreet. There was that boy, not a boy, but a fiend of battle, shouting, cheering, whooping at the very front in every charge. Two men had to drag him away when we were forced back.

"After the fight Longstreet promptly had his straps returned to him. Again the youngster went in as an officer, and again he ran. For the second time Longstreet put the boy back in the ranks in disgrace, only to reappoint him after a fight. As usual, the boy lieutenant ran.

"Then, before he could be summoned, he sought out the general's tent. Longstreet looked at him sourly.

"'What do you want?'

"The lad flung his sword on the ground and tore the straps from his shoulders. 'Take your old sword,' he said. 'I wouldn't have it. I'm going back in the ranks.' And he stalked proudly from the presence of the astounded general and his staff.

"Three days later a boy hero fell yards in advance of a charging gray line."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Moroccо Superstition.

In a paper to the Anthropological institute Dr. Westermark showed from investigations in Morocco that the Arab jinn, or gnun, is regarded as a special race of beings created before Adam, of no fixed form and assuming, like Proteus, who was perhaps a personage of the same extraction, almost any shape they please. Bad jinns attack men, but are kept away by salt or steel and verses of the Koran. The author supposes that the belief in jinns has come down from a saltless and frouless age, but was absorbed and developed at a later time under the influence of Islam.

I am going to buy another for the younger boy and make Johnny watch him while he eats it."
