POOR SUPPORT OF LOCAL NEWS-PAPERS.

"We have been asked to whoop up some improvements for Moore during our time during 1901 in making improvements on the Enquirer.

And as a New Year's resolution, the JOURNAL questions very much the seriousness of it, as applicable to the Enquirer, for the local newspaper man in North Carolina is not made, nor has he developed into such a hog, as to be able to stick to his own bush, and let his community shift for itself.

Without knowing whether local conditions inspired the Editor of the Enquirer to write such a resolution, it is nevertheless a resolution which too many North Carolina Editors might write as descriptive of how they would like to act, beginning with this twentieth century.

It is not that there are people in every community who cannot afford to give support to the local newspaper, but that too many of those who can give this support do not and will not, but each selfishly sticks to his own bush.

The local newspaper is not a charitable institution, but a local industry, just as much as a cotton mill or any manufacturing enterprise.

It has just as much right to demand of its people their individual and united patronage, as does the local merchant, who will complain if any person goes away from town to buy the goods he has for sale.

The citizens of a town will complain of the small size of their local newspaper and the paucity of its news, and never think that the real cause of its smallness is due to themselves, their meager support of it.

The newspaper, its editing and publication, and the cost of issuing it, is a business proposition for its proprietor, as much so as is the sale of goods to any merchant in the town, only the support of the local newspaper is of far more importance to a town, than is the proposition that every person shall give full support to every local merchant.

No local matter is of such vital importance to any community as the protection and building up of its local newspaper.

MY MOTHER-IN-LAW. When I married my mother-in-law, she was a very old woman, and she was very weak.

A PSYCHIC PHENOMENON.

In This Case No Head Was Paid to the Warnings.

"Speaking of superstitions and strange warnings that come to people," said a veteran Washington correspondent, "I had an experience once that I have never been able to account for."

"I went about the committee rooms and at last, quite forgetful of my late warnings, went to the elevator to go up to the gallery."

"I don't know," said he, "whether I ought to let you come in here or not."

"I don't know," said he, "whether I ought to let you come in here or not."
