CUT OUT THE JOBBERY PARTS.

The defeat of the river and harbor appropriation bill is a serious matter to all the legitimate items contained in it

Of these legitimate items, those concerning the river and harbor work in Eastern North Carolina are most important as affecting the commerce and the commercial interests, present and fu'ure, of the State,

In the Cape Fear river section, the government appropriations have given the City of Wilmington a great highway to the sea with a magnificent harbor at the mouth of the Cape Fear river at Southport, with a water depth of 26 feet on the bar, where previously 12 and 14 feet of water was the best to be found.

With the defeat of the bill providing for appropriations, there must ensue for the next fifteen months at least, a cessation of all work on the Cane Fear river and bar, with the probability that much of the work already accomplished will be lost, and must be done again. In the Neuse and Trent rivers there is much that could be done which would improve the commercial value of the sections through which they run. All this must be delayed, and some really necessary work on the Neuse river, important as affecting the commercial interests of New Bern, will have to go over until some future day.

The matter with this river and harbor appropriation bill is, that the legitimate objects sought by appropriations, have become over balanced by items which have no justice or merit in them, but which have been forced in the bill, until the good are compelled to suffer, because of the outweighing evil.

This bill had become a splendid political resource, by which the politicians could make combinations that would inure to the politician's benefit, regardless that the items included in the bill were really misappropriations of money for work that had no practical basis for Its object.

With the bill dead, the next river and harbor bill should start out clean, and be kept free from log rolling, and every appropriation asked for should have the sanction of practical engineers whose judgment is not bissed by politics.

Let all jobbery be eliminated in the next river and harbor bill, then legitimate ends will be accomplished, and the real water commercial highways of the country will be protected and their full interests faithfully served.

MONEY IN GUATEMALA.

The Rub Comes When Fractions Currency is Encountered.

"They have a financial system in Guatemala that would do credit to a comic opera," said a New Orleans fruit importer, talking about queer things in the little Central American republics. "I was down there recently and found nothing but paper money in circulation. The government bank notes, in denominations of from $1 up, are generally accepted at five to one in gold or half that in 'Mexican.' In other words, $5 Guatemalan money equals $1 in gold or $2 in silver, and, as the rate is fairly stable, it causes no special annoyance.

"The rub comes when you get down to fractional currency. All kinds of small sliver coins have long since disappeared, and the government issues nothing less than dollars, but each civil 'department' prints a species of shinplaster, ranging in face value from 5 to 50 cents. These small notes are known colloquially as 'soldos,' and who authorized them or who guaranteed their payment are twin mysteries was never able to fathom. As you may well imagine, they vary considerably in purchasing power. Some of them are received by storekeepers at 5 to 1, some pass 20 to 1, and very frequently they are refused altogether.

"To still further complicate things, the soldos of each of the departments are totally worthless in all the others. Before I fully appreciated the intricacles of the system I was visiting a good sized mining town that happens to be directly on the boundary line between two departments and ordered a bottle of beer at a native restaurant. The price was 40 cents, and I pulled out a handful of soldes and told the proprietor to belo himself. He looked at them scornfully and said they were no good. 'But, my dear man,' I protested. 'I just bought some cigars with them at a shop not 100 yards from your door.' 'Ah, but that was on the other side of the street, senor,' be re-"That is not our department!" I wilted and gave him a good United States dollar. "To bridge over the 'change' difficulty a number of the stores get out small metal tokens about the size of baggage checks and stamped with the firm name and the denomination at which they are issued. They are redeemable over the counter as long as the store lasts and are really the most trustworthy currency in the country. One German storekeeper has varied the programme slightly by printing small paper notes. He uses manila paper and strikes them off on a ramshackle hand press in a back room, so, needless to say, they are not very beautiful to look at, but each of them bears his signature, and they pass anywhere at par. It's a great country to live in. Any man with a stock of merchandise can run a private treasury department as an annex."-New Orleans Times-Democrat,

Longevity In England.

"The following facts consequent upon a wager made by me a year ago may interest some of your readers. The wager was that I should find recorded in your obituary columns for the year 1900 a daily average of five deaths of persons who had attained the age of 80 years or upward-in other words, 1,500 for the year. I find 1,882 instead of 1,500, an average rather exceeding six instead of five. The proportion of these deaths to the total number of deaths advertised is some what between a fifth and a sixth. The chief 'death tally' occurred in the early months of the year-namely, January to May. By far the most fatal month was January. Strange to say, the June and July totals exceed those of December, thus apparently adding another nail to the coffin of the now discredited adage that a green yule makes a fat churchyard."-Letter in London

Good Shots. The British and Boers at Pieters bill were crouching behind bowlders scattered over a wide surface. The moment a man on either side emerged from his cover he was at once the tar get of the enemy's bullets. A Boer, partly, it seemed, in bravado, made s sudden sally jo join a neighbor. An Englishman, who had long watched the rock and was becoming sick with hope deferred, took aim and brought the daring one down. So delighted was be with his luck that he threw himself on his back behind the shallow shelter of his bowlder and kicked his beels into the air. In his transport his beel rose above the rock, as he was instantly made aware by a bullet transfixing bis fluttering ankle.

McClure's for March.

The leading article in McClure's Magazine for March will be a character study Edward the Seventh, written by George W. Smalley, the American correspondent of the London Times, and Illustrated by a remarkable collection of photographs.

"Life Portraits of Queen Victoria will be a feature in the March number. The series is made up of reproductions from photographs and paintings, and it is of notable historical value." "Disbanding the Union Army" is the title of an article by Ida M. Tarbell, which will appear in the March number of McClure's Magazine. This will fully describe the extraordinary feat accomplished by the Federal Government at the close of the Cival War, when, without any disaster, a million soldiers were returned to quiet pursui s. The article is elaborately illustrated.

March Ladies' Home Journal.

"The Only American Girl Who Ever Married a King," "The Loveliest of All Kentucky Girla," "The Anecdotal Side of Theodore Roosevelt," and "The Author's Reading at Bixby Centre," by Kate Douglas Wiggin, will have a wide reading in the March Ladies' Home Journal. And "The Gibson Play," toc. It acceptuates the satirical humor of Charles Danna Gibson's "Widow and Her Friends" in a two-act comedy by Marquerite Merington The illustrations by Mr. Gibson are characteristic and interesting. Edward Bok's editorials and Helen Watterson Moody's 'Girls Who 'Go In' for Something" are helpful in counsel, and will be profitsbly read. A good share of space is devoted to Easter fashions to feminine attire, and there are articles on cooking. china painting; a page picture showing 'The Old Stage and the Tumpike," of W. L.
