NEW BERN, N. C., FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 22, 1901.

NINETEENTH YEAR

HACKBURN

SELLS R. & G. CORSETS.

Every woman knows what the R. & G. corset is. It is the corset of comfort with the essence of style. It is the only corset that will not, cannot, and does not stretch. If you buy an R. & G. Corset that does stretch or proves unsatisfactory in any way, bring it back to us and we will give you a new one.

We have in stock the Famous No. 397, moderately straight front, which is popular with most women who do not demand an extreme straight front. Those who do will find it in the new, straight front shown in our illustration.

Our corset stock is large and well selected. Call and see it.

We sell No. 397 for $1.00

THE ARGUMENT.

Opened Yesterday in The Trial of The Judges.

Judge Clark a Witness but was not Sensational. Trial Likely to end Soon. Guthrie Opens for Prosecution.

Special to Journal.

Raleigh, March 21.—Judge Walter Clark was put on the stand today and was called by the prosecution.

Yesterday in the impeachment trial Judge Montgomery was the star witness, but at the last his nervous system gave way and he was quite badly demoralized. His testimony against Judge Walter Clark was so direct however, that Clark had to be put on the stand today, through the purpose of the prosecution had been not to make him a witness. The news that he was to have the stand attracted a large audience. It is noticeable that the same people, or practically so, attend the trial daily. One of the most prominent clergymen of Raleigh says it is more nearly like an ecclesiastical court than any other.

The defense was said to have been anxious to cross-examine Judge Clark, but when he went to the stand he said but little and did not contradict the testimony of the other three judges. Hence the defense did not exercise their right to cross-examine.

At noon the argument of the counsel began. W. A. Guthrie made the opening speech for the prosecution.

Guthrie had not finished at the regular hour of adjournment at six o'clock. At the opening tomorrow at 10 o'clock he will continue and will finish in a short time.

Cotton Mills in Winston.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., March 21.—A movement is started here today to build a $100,000 cotton mill in North Winston on the co-operative and installment plan. Options have been secured for a site and the promoters are confident the enterprise will be established.

Impachment Managers Feast With a Prospective Judge.

Special to Journal.

Raleigh, March 21.—Francis D. Winston, representative from Bertie, last night banqueted the managers of impeachment and their counsel. It is said Winston will be judge for the new 2nd district.

TURNED TO THE WALL.

New Law Knocks out the Iniquitous Slot Machine. No Court Opinions Filed.

Raleigh, March 21.—A bar keeper here whose profits on a gambling slot machine last year were $1,000, today turned his machine with its face to the wall. On the machine there is a crane and this placard, "I was happy until I ran up against Senator Broughton." The latter procured the enactment of the law knocking out these gambling machines, which in truth are the greatest promoters of gambling in this State.

The Supreme Court did not file any opinions this week. There are only three judges now on the bench.

Rain fell yesterday afternoon and last night. Farmers say it was never so badly needed at this season of the year.

A Message of Thanks.

New York, March 20.—Mayor Van Wyck today sent a cablegram to Andrew Carnegie heartily thanking him for his offer to give $5,000,000 for the establishment of free circulation libraries in New York City.

No Outbreak Yet.

London, March 20.—The officials of the Foreign Office here have received no information of an outbreak of Russian-British hostilities at Tien Tsin. Their latest despatches there say the position remains the same.

LUMBER MERCHANT DEAD.

Head of the Branning Lumber Company at Edenton, N. C.

Special to Journal.

Raleigh, March 21.—News reached here today of the death of Mr. Branning, the head of the great Branning Lumber Company and by far the largest lumber man in this State. His death occurred at Edenton. He had mills there and at several other points, owned great tracts of timberland in Tyrrell, Bertie and other counties, owned a railroad from Winston to Ahoskie with 41 miles of branch, was president of another railway and was largely interested in cotton mills also. He was a native of New Jersey and came to North Carolina about 18 years ago. He was held in great esteem and had much influence in northeastern North Carolina.

THE CHARLESTON EXPOSITION.

Not Seriously Injured by Failure of the Government Appropriation.

Charleston, S. C., March 21.—The failure of congress to make an appropriation of $250,000 for a government exhibit at the South Carolina Inter-State and West Indian exposition to be held at Charleston, will not interfere in any way with the scope and purpose of the undertaking. The work of construction on the exposition grounds and buildings is proceeding with all possible expedition. The bill which congress failed to pass simply provided the means for covering the expenses of the government building and exhibit. Not one penny of the amount asked for could have been diverted to any other than government uses that the failure of the bill, while a disappointment to those who lean upon the government support for the achievement of practical ends, has not diminished the resources of the exposition company or caused any change in its general plan.

The great manufacturing and industrial development of the south, and the opportunities which will be presented through the exposition at Charleston, of the cultivation and establishment of closer trade relations, between the United States and the West Indies, will make the participation of the great manufacturing and commercial states and cities of practical value to them.

GREAT GAME PRESERVE

Sportsmen All Interested in the New Scheme.

TO BE LOCATED IN SOUTHWEST.

Convention of Sportsmen Soon to Meet to Consider Plans For the Establishment of Large Preserve Where All Sorts of Wild Animals May Be Saved From Extinction—And Will Be Asked of Congress.

The establishing of a great game preserve embracing a portion of southwestern Arizona and northwestern Mexico and probably a small part of California is a project which was not conceived until recently, but which will likely be talked about by sportsmen all over the country within a few months. A small party of explorers recently visited Tucson after making a trip through the country adjacent to the head of the gulf of California, representing it is believed, a number of sportsmen of the middle states, bent on formulating a plan for the protection of game and to prevent the extermination of certain species. A convention of sportsmen will soon meet in Chicago or Denver to consider plans for the establishment of a great game preserve.

That portion of the country south of Yuma, including a small section of California and considerable territory in Mexico is one of the most fruitful fields for the Nimrods of this country today. It abounds in wild game of all sorts, and with the help of man a large expanse of land could be converted into one of the greatest and most inviting game preserves in the world.

The extermination of wild game in this country and the urgent necessity of adopting drastic measures for the prevention of further ruthless slaughter are two subjects which have long occupied the attention of American sportsmen. Never before have they been so stirred up to the necessity as within the past few months, when from all over the country there have been demands for congressional action. State and territorial legislation has proved insufficient, but federal action in recent years has checked wholesale slaughter in this and other territories and states. However, slowly but surely certain kinds of wild game, such as deer and antelope, will be extinct in Arizona within a few years, and in a shorter time the mountain sheep, now found in a few parts of this territory, will disappear unless early action is taken. It is because of the threatened extermination that congress will soon be asked to make an appropriation for creating a game preserve or at least for its moral support.

The redskins of Arizona have made great inroads into the ranks of deer and antelope, leaving their reservations frequently to engage in systematic slaughter of those animals. The Apaches in eastern Arizona kill only the game they require for meat and leather. It is said that the Navajos of northern Arizona and other Indians of this territory do not kill game on the whole sale plan merely for the sport, as is commonly believed, but they seem to require an inordinate amount for ordinary use. Occasionally they leave their reservations, where long ago game became so scarce to invite the hunter, and organize bands which go after big game with guns and bows and arrows in much the same manner that American sportsmen organize rabbit drives. Great piles of half-scraped deer hides speak unmistakably of the slaughter which attends one of these expeditions.

A party consisting of Professor W. J. McGee, Delany Gill, an artist, and others representing the Smithsonian Institution recently passed through the six after exploring the Tiburon Islands, in the gulf of California, returning from Sonora by an old road near Tenajon Atlas. The party went to examine the condition of the cannibalistic Ceris Indians of Tiburon Island, who murdered H. E. L. Robinson, a newspaper man, and a companion six years ago and feasted on their bodies. On account of the tribal friction a few years ago a small band of these savages left the island of Tiburon and made their way to the coast of Mexico, subsequently traveling north and establishing a small colony near Quitova.

The Smithsonian party went among the Indians at that place for the third time, finding them in the same condition on each trip. They have not multiplied in numbers in the past score of years, and their manner of living and habits have not varied. In visiting these Indians McGee's journey took him through the heart of the game country, which in time may be set apart as a preserve. All along his path he discovered game in such profusion that he made a part of his trip the study of the wild animals of that region. The Indians near Quitova led him into some remarkable hunting grounds, where deer and wild hogs, a large species of peccary, tame and unfamiliar with the white sportsmen's methods, were but little intimidated by the approach of the party. The professor returns enthusiastic over the game conditions of that region. Wild animals abound there as they did only a few years ago in many parts of this country; but although the region is not remote from thickly populated sections, it has been almost entirely neglected by hunters, untouched by the hand of white man, and its location from the haunts of man would be complete but for the presence of a handful of redskins who roam over that section. The country is so formed, said Professor McGee, that some of the lands could be irrigated by water from the Colorado river, making of them even more alluring stamping ground for wild game.
