THE PROTEST AGAINST NEW CONDITIONS.

Every community has citizens whose conduct of life, social, religious and commercial, is illiberal and narrow.

There are cities which are fully abreast of the times in every way, and to the outsider it would appear as if in these cities there were no citizens small and narrow, objectors to every new or suggested change in the way of improvement, development and progress.

And yet it is only the superior number of citizens whose force and character over ride the fewer in number, and thus carry forward their communities to greater development.

There is too much in human nature which seeks to move along quietly and not want to be disturbed. And yet it is the so called disturbers, persons ever reaching out for new things, seeking improvements, no matter if these improvements greatly alter previous existing affairs, it is such persons who are really the life of every community.

Conservatism of the right kind, is a splendid attribute to possess, be it in the person or the community.

But there is a conservatism which some persons and communities pride themselves as possessing, which is simple narrowness and selfishness.

It is the spirit of protest against any change in existing conditions, under the specious plea that it is best to "leave well enough alone," when the "well enough" means that their personal affairs, be they social, religious or commercial, shall not have any competition to deal with.

And it is this so-called conservatism which prompts men in a community to cry out against any projected improvements, because such improvements may cost them something in the way of taxes, and also because others besides themselves will receive benefits.

The fact that the community generally may be greatly benefited, is not the thing they look at, but their side of the question is, what is in it for me.

Every person, every community of people, should seek to overcome the spirit which is hostile to new conditions, a hostility without a thought of investigating to see whether the proposed change is for the better of existing conditions.

In this kind of spirit which keeps down progress and prevents any local development and every kind of improvement.

Fought For His Life.

"My father and sister both died of Consumption," writes J. T. Wastl of Wyandotte, Mich., "and I was saved from the same fright ful fate only by Dr. King's New Discovery. An attack of Pneumonia left me about as weak and very severe lung trouble, which an excellent doctor could not help, but a few months use of this wonderful medicine made me as well as ever, and I gained much in weight." Infallible for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung trouble. Guaranteed at any drug store. $1.00 at C. D. Bradham's drug store. Trial bottle free.

Reading an Avalanche.

One of the most exciting Alpine adventures on record was Mr. Tuckett's race with an avalanche on the Rieger glacier in 1871. He was ascending the glacier with two friends and a guide. Says Travel:

The glacier sloped somewhat steeply, and on the upper part, above the climbers, a mass of loose, freshly fallen snow had collected. Suddenly the travelers heard a thundering noise and perceived a huge mass of snow and ice sliding down toward them. They could only try to reach the rocks at the side of the glacier, hoping to do so before the avalanche should sweep them away. Through the knee deep snow they ran for their lives.

"I remember," said Mr. Tuckett, "being struck with the idea that it seemed as if the avalanche were sure of its prey and wished to play with us for awhile. At one moment it let us imagine that we had gained on it, and the next, with mere wantonness of vindictive power, it suddenly rolled out a vast volume of grinding blocks and whirling snow, as if to show us that it could outflank us any moment it chose.

"Nearer and nearer it came, its front a mighty wave about to break. It aimed straight at us, swift, deadly, implacable. The next instant we saw no more. A wild confusion of whirling snow and fragments of ice, a frozen cloud, swept over us, entirely concealing us from one another. But still we were untouched, and still we ran.

"Another half second, and the mist parted. There lay the body of the monster, whose head was still careering away at lightning speed far below us, motionless, rigid, harmless."

Rather Outspoken.

"When a man in the west likes not another," said a British Columbia man, "he is in no way disposed to hide that fact under a bushel basket or to conceal it from either the gentleman disliked in particular or the rest of the community in general.

"I remember an example of this trait that came under my notice some years ago in Idaho. A certain old fellow named Haas ran a paper there, and he and Judge Buck, the judge who rendered the celebrated decision in the famous 'Poor Man' Tiger litigation, were sworn enemies. Another old timer named Cheney disliked Haas and Buck and had it in for them both.

"One night at Wallace a dinner was given, at which Buck, Haas and Cheney were present, and at a late stage in the proceedings Cheney was called upon for a speech. I don't remember the topic he chose or how he brought it in, but when he got through Cheney left in the minds of his hearers no manner of doubt as to how he felt toward the other two.

"'Gentlemen,' said Cheney as he hung unsteadily to the end of the table, for the wine had been passing freely, 'old man Haas says Judge Buck is a perjurer and a blackmailer, and Judge Buck says old man Haas is a horse thief and a liar. As both the gentlemen are extremely well acquainted with each other and should know whereof they speak, I do not feel called upon to dispute either statement.'

"And then he sat down amid tumultuous applause."—New York Tribune.

Doing the Glazier a Kindness.

A traveling tinker out of work bemoaned his hard luck to a sympathetic glazier.

"I'll soon put that right for you," said the glazier. "Just come up to that big hotel over there in half an hour's time, and you'll find work."

Accordingly the tinker made his appearance at the appointed time and found himself in great request, as all the good wife's pots and pans had mysteriously sprung leaks.

Needless to say the glazier had slyly operated on them to provide a job for his acquaintance.

Having finished his work, the tinker trudged off, full of gratitude, and soon arrived at a wayside schoolhouse.

A happy thought striking him, he determined to repay the glazier's kind deed, and, arming himself with stones, he speedily smashed every window in the house.

Returning, he intimated to his friend the service he had rendered him, but was amazed to see the man of glass become convulsed with rage.

"Great Scott, man," shouted the latter, "you've ruined me! I repair the windows of that school by yearly contract!"—London Answers.

Avoiding Worry.

Husband—Quarreled with her?

"No, but I don't want you to see her."

"Hum! Why not?"

"I know you'll admire that new dress of hers, and it will only worry you to think what a ridiculous fuss you made over the bills for this cheap thing I've got on."—New York Weekly.

Teeth Put to Many Uses.

All Eskimos have good teeth, but they are subjected to severe usage, being used for pinchers, vises and cutting machines.

The teeth are employed in drawing bolts, untying knots, holding the mouthpiece of a drill, shaping boot soles, stretching and tanning skins. When they become uneven from hard usage they are leveled off with a file or whetstone.

As vaccination prevents smallpox, and quinine chills and fever, so TEETHINA prevents and counteracts the effects of the summer's heat, much dreaded by mothers with small children. TEETHINA relieves the many troubles incident to teething and the hot summers, and no mother is excusable for not giving it, for it costs only 25 cents at druggists, or mail 5 cents to C. J. BOLTON'S LAST YEAR.

The Way He Spent It Preparing For His Death.

"Billy Bolton, the Lansingburg brewer, was a very rich man and one with a host of friends," said an up state man to the New York Sun. "His brewery in Lansingburg was a profitable concern, and he practically owned about all the saloons in that town.

"One day after a consultation his physicians told him that he had Bright's disease and that he surely would not live more than a year. Billy took their word for it and made up his mind to make the fur fly while life was left. He had never traveled much, and so he decided to go around the world.

"He took with him a congenial friend and plenty of money, and away they went. They left a trail of fire and ashes through all the capitals of Europe and the queer and strange places of Asia and Africa. After nine months they came back, and Bolton brought with him the most marvelous collection of souvenirs and presents that any man not a professional collector ever brought into this country. The duties amounted to $3,000.

"Arrived in Lansingburg, Billy hired the town hall, sent his packing boxes filled with these oriental and European treasures up to the hall and had them all taken out and put on exhibition as though for a church fair. Upon each article he marked the name of some friend whom he wished to remember with a gift. There were hundreds in this category, but Billy had presents for them all.

"On the day appointed for the presentation he invited his army of friends to the town hall. To each he turned over the present selected for him, and amid the cheers of his grateful and admiring fellow townsmen the hall was stripped of its beautiful things.

"When the last present had been placed in the hands of its recipient, Billy went back to his home and lay down to die. Within the year his physicians' prophecy came true, and the town gave him the finest funeral that any man ever had."

Relief for Jacksonville Sufferers.

New York, May 6—A joint committee of the chamber of commerce and merchants association, to raise funds for the Jacksonville fire sufferers, today authorized the purchase of twenty thousand dollars worth of supplies and ordered them forthwith shipped to Jacksonville.

If people only knew what we know about Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, it would be used in nearly every household as there are few people who do not suffer from a feeling of fullness after eating, belching, flatulence, sour stomach or waterbrash, caused by indigestion or dyspepsia. A preparation, such as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which, with no aid from the stomach, will digest your food, certainly can't help but do you good. F S Duffy & Co.

France Must Assist Russia.

St. Petersburg, May 6—Minister Witte frankly told M. Delcasse, the French Minister of foreign affairs who is visiting here, that France must raise five million francs as a loan for Russia, lest many French industrial enterprises in Russia go to the wall.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at C. D. Bradham's drug store.

Negroes Leave Farms.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 6.—One hundred negroes arrived in the coal mines near here from Greensboro, N. C., today. Farmers around Greensboro complain of the decrease in the supply of farm labor resulting from this wholesale emigration and are preparing for half a crop.

"I have been suffering from Dyspepsia for the past twenty years and have been unable after trying all preparations and physicians to get any relief. After taking one bottle of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure I found relief and am now in better health than I have been for twenty years. I can not praise Kodol Dyspepsia Cure too highly." thus writes Mrs. C. W. Roberts, North Creek, Ark. F S Duffy & Co.

Glass Factory Strike.

Jamestown, N. Y., May 6.—Two hundred employes struck today by Gokey's glass factory because of the discharge of a number of union men and the employment of a non union superintendent.

Mr. W. J. Baxter of North Rose, N. Y. says he suffered with piles for fifteen years. He tried many remedies with results until he used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve and that quickly cured him. F S Duffy & Co.

THE SHOTE WAS THERE.

Why One Old Farmer Thinks He Would Make a Good Detective.

"Guess I wouldn't have much trouble gittin on the 'tective staff in Detroit 'cf I wanted ter make appreciation," said the old farmer kicked a log in the open fireplace so that he could see his neighbors better. They were assembled to hear him tell all about it.

"When I missed that shote outen the pen, next mornin it just came ter me sudden as lightnin that it had been stole by that thar George Washington Pepperville what had been workin for me. He knowed the dog, so it wouldn't bother him none, and he was the powerfulest man for fresh pork I ever see. So I goes inter town and tells the head man of the 'tectives, and he puts a couple of fellers on the job, and they reports that they was no shote about Pepperville's shanty, and they was no case ag'in him. I 'lowed I might be follerin the wrong track, but I kim home here and not my own stakes, and I was to Pepperville's afore sunup.

"'Wash,' I says, 'why didn't you keep that hog when you had him? Wasn't he fat 'nough yit ter suit you?'

"'Who you talkin to?' he muttered. 'I'll hab de law on you of you make me any mo' trouble 'bout dat hawg.'

"'Now, Wash,' says I, 'don't git your dander up. That there shote kim home in the night and went ter squealin ter git inter the pen. I put ole Rastus on the scent, and he landed me right here.'

"'Dog gone dat Rastus,' he shouted, 'I'll flay dat dog alibe!'

"And he sprung ter the middle of the room and ripped up the floorin, and there was the shote. Wash would have jumped on me, but I jest kivered him with that ole muzzle loadin pistol of mine and tole him ter go gentlelike.

"Well, sir, he begged and whined so I let him off, him agreein ter tote the pig home in a bag and ter chop wood fur me three days fur my trouble."—Detroit Free Press.

The Rehearsed Wedding.

The wedding was, upon the whole, an artistic success. The bride particularly evinced unmistakable talent. She trembled with all the technical accuracy of an aspen leaf and the emotional intensity of a startled fawn. Her trembling indeed was irreproachable. If she cast down her eyes with something of amateurish gawkiness, the fact is easily attributable to her inexperience, this being her first wedding, rather than to an essentially defective method. She was fairly well supported.

The bridegroom rose from his knees too soon and had to be knocked down by the prompter, but otherwise the minor parts were carried out creditably.—Detroit Journal.

Felt Familiar.

Bennet Burleigh related a pleasant story in the London Telegraph. The incident, which happened in his sight and hearing, was as follows: Two officers, total strangers, new arrivals from up country, rather lonely and bored, were awaiting luncheon. The older having proposed that they should sit together, a mutual friendliness developed so rapidly that at last one said to the other: "Do you know, I rather like you, and there's something about you that seems familiar, as if we had met before? I'm Major S. of the Blanks." "Indeed! Are you? I thought so. And I'm Lieutenant S. of —'s staff, just joined—your youngest brother!"

A Great Error.

"My hero dies in the middle of my latest novel," said the young author.

"That's a grave mistake," replied the editor. "He should not die before the reader does."—Atlanta Constitution.

George Washington's Lottery.

It is not generally known that the great Father of His Country was on at least one occasion the originator of a lottery, the like of which at the present day would be forbidden to send its tickets through the mails. That George Washington was interested in such a scheme is proved by a number of tickets still in existence which bear his august name. It was the Mountain Road lottery of which George was the promoter, and it is, of course, unnecessary to state that Washington himself did not financially profit from it. All the funds raised by the lottery were spent in building the road through Cumberland gap, near Fredericksburg, Va. Originally the lottery tickets which Washington signed were worth $1 each. Now, because they bear his signature, they are easily sold for $50 apiece, though it is certain that not one of them will ever draw a prize.

"Our little girl was unconscious from strangulation during a sudden and terrible attack of croup. I quickly secured a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure, giving her three doses. The croup was mastered and our little darling speedily recovered." So writes A. L. Spafford, Chester, Mich. F S Duffy & Co

RUSSIA AND MANCHURIA.

An American Traveler Says the Czar Will Not Take Chinese Territory.

A recent arrival from China is Ralph James, who for nearly 15 years has been extensively engaged in mining at Kaigan, near Peking, and in Siberia. Since his arrival he has placed orders for machinery to cost nearly $400,000. Years ago Mr. James was engaged in newspaper work in New York and Pennsylvania.

Talking with a New York Times reporter at the Fifth Avenue hotel the other day, he said:

"I have just returned from a long sojourn on Russian and Chinese soil. It is my opinion that Russia will never take Manchuria or permit others to seize it.

"Russia and the Russians are misunderstood. The evil of the misunderstanding is easily traced. It is due to the diplomatic use of newspapers by Great Britain. The latter is a jealous nation, with a powerful navy. Her great factories have lost the trade with Russia, and America has gained it. England sees this and, to head off the inevitable, has had a score of writers for years in the London offices grinding out false news to be transmitted to all parts of the world about Russia.

"In 1893 the Russian government first received a concession in Manchuria from China. Russia made a formidable fort out of Port Arthur and constructed a railroad across Manchuria at a cost of over $50,000,000. Last summer, during the troubles, over $30,000,000 damage was done to this railroad by the Boxers. In order to save her property and preserve it from entire destruction Russia sent 125,000 soldiers along the road, and the Chinese who had become roving bands of outlaws and thieves were driven almost entirely from the country.

"The emperor of Russia is a home loving man, and his subjects who are now in that Manchurian army are of the farming class of Siberia, and it is the emperor's wish to have this army sent home, where they are needed to prepare for the coming season's crops. Still Russian property must be protected, and with such purpose in view Russia tried to gradually withdraw from Manchuria, making terms with Chinese officials to protect the great railroad.

"The Chinese are well aware of the friendship of Russia. They know that in 1893 the czar prevented Manchuria, Mongolia and Tibet from revolting and raising the Russian flag over their countries. The high princes and priests of those three countries have visited the czar every year, praying for permission to raise the Russian flag over them, and every time these representatives received the same answer: 'Russia will never permit her flag to be raised over your countries. We want your country, peopled by its present citizens, as a great open field and barrier between the populated districts of China proper and the borders of Russia.'

"Had one gone along the line of the Transsiberian railway last fall, as I did, during the illness of the czar there would have been a sight worthy the attention of other nations to behold and ponder over. All the way from Vladivostok in the east to Moscow in the west men, women and children were kneeling in the streets in prayer for the recovery of their father, the czar."

The Man and the Rope.

A Chinaman who had been condemned to wear the cangue, or wooden collar, was seen by some of his friends.

"What have you been doing," they asked, "to deserve this?"

"Oh, nothing," he replied. "I only picked up an old piece of rope."

"And are you to be punished thus severely," they asked; "for merely picking up an end of rope?"

"Well," answered the man, "the fact is there was a bullock tied to the other end."—H. A. Giles' "History of Chinese Literature."

Up In the Air.

"What sort of a fellow is Swellhup?"

"Well, he's one of those fellows that you can never convince that there's plenty of room at the top."

"Pessimistic, eh?"

"Not at all, but he thinks he's there already, and that he occupies all the space."—Philadelphia Press.

PROSPEROUS MEN OF THE WORLD

wouldn't think of wearing a ready made suit of clothing. One of the luxuries of life is to have your clothing to fit well, hang well, look well and suit your individuality—especially in warm weather. We will make you a suit of clothing from serge, at prices that will give you this luxury at a fair price.

Important Post Office Notice.

It is very important that all persons holding keys to Post office boxes not now rented by them surrender them at this office at once. The keys are not sold by the Government. They are the property of the United States. The boxes have to be rented to other parties and it is not desirable to have some other party holding a key to their box. If mail should be missed out of the box, suspicion would of course rest upon the one not having the key.

If this notice is not complied with and the keys surrendered I shall be compelled to publish the names of those withholding keys to boxes they have vacated.

S. W. HANCOCK,
Postmaster.
