RALEIGH.

Great Work of Text Book Commission.

Largest Colored Church in State Opened. No Sick at Soldiers Home. State Guard Must Do Without Khaki Uniforms.

RALEIGH, May 13.—St. Paul's A. M. E. Church, the largest and perhaps the oldest negro church in the State, was opened for worship here yesterday. Many white persons were present. The church cost $40,000. It seats 2,000 persons. The pulpit, of marble, was made by a negro of this city as his gift to the church and is well designed and executed. The sermon was by Bishop Lee of Ohio and he referred to the great progress made by the negroes in North Carolina since St. Paul's was begun, in 1884, 17 years ago.

The text book Commission again met today. It was unable to finish its work Saturday night. Lt. Gov. Turner had to go home and left his proxy with storky general Ollmer. The latter was sick this morning. The commission has had a great task upon it; to select books for the next 5 years. The question arises whether it could not have made the selections itself as well as if there had been no sub-commission, since it appears to be understood that the commission acts independently, that is decides upon the books. The governor himself made all the appointments to the sub-commission. He selected those gentlemen without regard to endorsements, taking those he considered best fitted.

Grand Secretary Woodell of the Odd Fellows left today for Nashville to attend the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows. Raleigh sends a strong delegation there. Rev. B. B. Culbreth, of the M. E. Conference, today removed here from Jouseboro.

There are now no sick in the hospital at the Soldiers home.

It is found that Khaki uniforms cannot be issued to the State Guard this year, as the regular army's demands for that clothing are so great that the war department cannot make issues to volunteers. The State charters the Coal, Cement & Supply Co., of Wilmington, capital $100,000, S. P. Adams and other stockholders.

The Grand Commandery, the Grand Chapter and the Mystic Shriner, all Masonic orders of high degree, will have annual sessions at Greensboro Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday; also a banquet. The South Carolina Shriners will all be present.

Skin affections will readily disappear by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Look out for counterfeits. If you get DeWitt's you will get good results. It is the quick and positive cure for piles. F. S. Duffy & Co.

NO BOOKS ADOPTED.

The Text Book Commission Adjourns Without Being Able to Make Decision.

Special to Journal.

RALEIGH, May 13.—The text book commission adjourned at 3 o'clock this afternoon without having decided as to the books.

The Governor gave out the following statement: "The Commission adjourned subject to call of the President. It is understood that no decision will be arrived at for some time. The Commission is in possession of all information which it desired, except as to prices of books, and will have no further interviews with book men or their representatives, except as to prices, and then only when the Commission asks for prices. The Commission found and could not determine the matter within the period it first thought, and other duties of the various State officers make necessary a delay."

It is a fortnight before it meets again, as the Governor goes to New York next week.

While many books have been favorably commented upon by the Commission there is up to this time no practicable adoption.

You are much more liable to disease when your liver and bowels do not act properly. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove the cause of disease. F. S. Duffy & Co.

MEMORIAL ADDRESS.

By Honorable Benjamin F. Grady On May 10th.

Causes Leading Up to War. The Old South. Broken Compacts and Compromises. Errors Incidental and Relative to Sectional Controversy.

Daughters of the Confederacy, Confederate Veterans, ladies and gentlemen:

Some time ago I received a request from the New Bern Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy to serve as the orator on the occasion of the exercises to be held this day over the graves of the fallen. I hesitated for some time, notwithstanding the cordiality of the invitation and the flattering terms in which the secretary conveyed it. I am a stranger to the men who followed Lee and Stonewall Jackson, and they are strangers to me. My military life was spent in the West, in Cleburne's Division and hence I am necessarily "without the inspiration which comes from a recollection of common dangers, common hardships, and common triumphs."

But I could not refuse to come. Every man who followed the Stars and Bars in the long and arduous struggle for the political and civil liberty which was wronged by George III or by our ancestors, was my brother, and every woman whose prayers went up day and night for the success of the Confederate cause, who denied herself and her babes the comforts of life in order to supply the wants of the ragged and hungry battalions of the Confederacy, was my sister.

If any were traitors, I was a traitor. If any were patriots, I was a patriot. If history shall honor the 600,000 men who resolutely withstood for four long years the fury onslaughts of 2,867,028 invaders it will honor me. If history shall shed a tear over the subjugation of our Southland by armies containing 630,917 foreigners and negroes 80,000 more than the entire Southern force, it will shed a tear over me.

What duty, then, is more imperative, what obligation more sacred, than that I should join you in honoring the memory of those who lie in these graves, and raise my voice in justification of the cause for which they gave up their lives.

Why is this justification necessary? Who needs to know the reasons for the conduct of the South in 1860-1? The civilized world need to know them, including almost the entire population of the Southern States. Thirty-five years ago the natural teachers of those people have been silent; thirty-five years these people have had Northern school histories, Northern newspapers, and Northern magazines instilling into them false views of the causes and the conduct of the war. Hence we can find thousands of men and women in almost every county in the Southern States who are totally ignorant of the long series of Northern aggressions which exhausted the patience of the South, and who are unable today to deny that the men lying in these graves were traitors. The unavoidable presumption that these men and their compatriots were not conscientious criminals shields them for the present, but if we remain silent, if the United Daughters of the Confederacy fail to accomplish the great work which pride of ancestry and love of truth conspires them to do, not many years hence there will be few to honor the memory of the Confederate soldier or defend the principles for which he contended.

Confronted by this situation, and finding that I shall not wander far from the path I am expected to travel, I invite you to a brief study of the early compact and non-compromises of the States expressed and implied, the infractions of those compacts and compromises, the long series of aggressions on the rights of the Southern States, and the many wrongs which logically followed unauthorized legislation.

Before entering upon the subject I have chosen, it may be proper to disclose my purpose to revise national attitudes. The real author of the seventy years of grievances which drove the Southern States into secession were a few fanatical reformers, the office-seeking demagogues, and the greedy capitalists, with the great masses of the South who were as just as the Southern States were and equally devoted to the principles of the moral law, and, in so far as they were instrumental in imposing or perpetuating wrongs on the South or in offending the sensibilities of our fathers, it was because of their ignorance of the nature of the Union, of the rights of the Southern people, and of their character and disposition. The false theory of freedom and slavery was kept before them—false, as we shall see, chiefly because they were not properly educated, and that they were kept blinded by the two purposes of their leaders. Being misled, they were misled by the two purposes of their leaders. Being misled, they were misled by the two purposes of their leaders.
