THE QUESTION OF INDIVIDUAL SAFETY.

The attempted assassination of Presi dent McKinley brings into special prominense the question of the individual safety of every leading citizen of this country.

This matter of safety touches n-t only the President, Vice President and leaders of political parties, but affects as well the leading monied men and financiers, bankers and merchants.

To have a personal gnard near, wherever a man moves, is repugnant to the person thus guarded, and our country's Presidents who have had detectives or secret service men following them on every trip, have submitted to it through a sense of duty as necessary to the office they held, and not through individual fear.

It is not tolerant to American spirit to be thus hedged about by men who shall do battle for another, for no matter how promittent the individual may be, the desire to take care of oneself is with each, and no outside aid is wanted.

The slight guards that have been thrown about our Chief Executives have proven ineffectual because it is not pos sible nor desirable that the President shall only be seen by the people through a line of cannon and soldiers.

No man can become President who is not an American patriot, and being of such a character he will not set himself. danger or no danger, where the people, his people, cannot approach him on the equal terms of citizenship.

Therefore its remains that a special provision of law shall be enacted that makes anarchy treasonable, and every known anarchist subject to instant arrest and puplshment.

Such a provision will in a very great degree remove the chances of assassingtion of our Presidents and prominent difizens who, not so much individually, but because they represent office or wealth, are regarded by the anarchist as Catarrh has become such a common disease that a person entirely free from this disgusting complaint is seldom met with.
