PRESIDENT McKINLEY DEAD!

Sudden Change For The Worst Yesterday Morning.

THE NATION SHOCKED!

Last Words of The Great Executive Full of Peace.

Buffalo Under Martial Law, Streets Filled With Sobbing And Hysterical Men And Women. Mrs. McKinley Collapses Under The Strain.
Passed Away at 2:15 A. M.

(EDITORIAL)

Scarcely had passed away the first horror of the President's being shot, and the joy that followed the announcement that his life would be spared, when the people of the United States were overwhelmed by the startling news of the President's critical condition, which came early Friday morning.

It was Black Friday in the direct sense of the word for a great Nation, whose citizens watched each bulletin for some sign of encouragement, some word which might justify the hope that William McKinley, the country's First Citizen, might be given life.

Not for the lack of prayers, or the absence of the love of a great people, has the life of President McKinley been taken.

To the human mind the reason is inexplicable. To the Divine Mind the reason is known. It is wise and good, and the future will prove the Supreme Wisdom, even though at present millions mourn.

In the death of William McKinley there is felt a personal loss in every section of the country, that a President is gone who was the friend of an entire nation, ever listening to appeals, and anxious to promote harmony and peace among the people.

A Great Executive has passed away,
A Great Statesman, Citizen and Patriot is gone, and yet there is the personality of the Man which is left as an inspiring inheritance to the American Youth of this and future generations.

BUFFALO, Sept. 13.—The earliest dispatches sent out concerning the President today were full of alarm.

Each report before noon said critical, and told of the constant attendance of the physicians who were unremitting in their efforts to sustain the President's life, by every known means of science.

Shortly after noon, a slight improvement was noted in the President's condition, but no hope could be expressed.

The following bulletin was issued at 2:30 p. m., by the President's physicians: "The President has more than held his own since morning and his condition justifies the expectation of further improvements. Pulse 120, temperature 99.4.

The uncertainty of the President's condition was expressed by a doctor as follows: "I cannot reiterate too often that the President is holding his own.
There are fluctuations, however. One moment he appears to revive, next the depression returns. We have by no means abandoned hope, but within ten minutes the greatly to be feared moment might come."

At 5:15 p. m., the report of the physicians was that the condition of the President was grave. He was suffering from extreme prostration. Oxygen is being given. He responded to stimulants but poorly. Pulse 120, respiration 40.

The oxygen treatment had slight effect, and in spite of vigorous stimulation the depression continued and was profound.

At seven o'clock his family were announced to his bedside, Mrs. McKinley, his brother Abner, and other relatives.
Cabinet officers and friends were in the antagonism.

The troops at Fort Porter were ordered under arms, and the police reserve were massed at headquarters to guard against any possible attack that might be made upon Czolgosz.

At eight o'clock under restoratives the President regained consciousness and called for his wife, who supported him while oxygen was administered.
The President recognized several of the doctors, and ordered all the relatives except his wife from the room.

At nine o'clock, the President was said to be in extremis.
A company of the Fourteenth Infantry has arrived, and the crowds around the house were driven back. The government telegraph tent is guarded. The National Guard Regiment under arms reported for service to the Chief of Police. The company of Artillery Regulars are in charge of the Exposition Grounds, and virtually throughout the city martial law prevails.

Mounted policemen forced back the mob surrounding police headquarters.
The Cabinet officers and others left the death chamber after taking silent farewell of the dying President.

Senator Hanna was completely broken down, as he kissed the President's forehead, and then led Mrs. McKinley, from the room.
At ten o'clock Secretary Cortelyou said the last moment had arrived, the President as before relapsing into unconsciousness, believed to be the premonition of death.

The pulse is flickering and body growing cold. A peaceful smile rests on his face.
Dr. Mann copied the President's last words which were "It is good. Thy will not ours be done."

Before Mrs. McKinley left, the President murmured "Nearer My God to Thee" and lapsed into unconsciousness before finishing the stanza.

Senator Dappew, Secretary Root and other prominent men left the house sobbing, those remaining being only relatives except the President's Secretary, Cortelyou.

Restoratives were again given Mrs.
McKinley, who was almost fainting.
Crowds of wildly excited men and women sobbing hysterically, fill the streets.

BUFFALO, September 14.—The President died at 2:15 this morning.

Geo. B. CORTELYOU,

Sec'y. to the President.

William McKinley was born at Niles, Ohio, on Jan. 29, 1843. He was Major of Volunteers in the Civil War. He served in Congress from 1876 to 1891, and was author of the Tariff bill of 1890, known as the McKinley bill. He was twice Governor of Ohio. Nominated for President at St. Louis in 1896, he was elected over Bryan by a popular plurality of 699,000 votes. He was unanimously re-nominated at Philadelphia last year, and was elected by a popular plurality of 848,000 over Bryan.

Mr. McKinley's father was also named William McKinley and his mother was Nancy Campbell Allison. Educated in the public schools and at Allegheny College, he was a public school teacher before the Civil War broke out.

In 1861 he enlisted as a private in the 23rd Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was promoted to Second and First Lieutenant and Captain in successive years. He served on the staffs of General R. B.
Hayes, George Crook and Winfield S.
Hancock, and was brevetted Major of Volunteers by President Lincoln for gallantry in battle, March 18, 1865. He was Assistant Adjutant-General of the 1st Army Corps until mustered out on July 26, 1865.

After studying law in Mahoning county, Ohio, and at Albany, New York, Mc-Kinley was admitted to the Ohio bar in 1867 and settled at Canton, which became his permanent home. He married Miss Ida Saxton, daughter of James A. Saxton, at Canton, in 1871.

Elected to Congress in 1876, he was continued in service there, and as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee he reported in 1890 the Tariff bill that became known by his name. He was especially known as an advocate of high protective tariff. Changes being made in his district by a Democratic Legislature, McKinley was defeated in the November election of 1890. He was chosen Governor of Ohio in the following year and re-elected in 1893.

McKinley supported Blaine in the party convention of 1884, and he was with Ohio's delegation for John Sherman four years later. In the convention of 1892 he received 182 votes for nomination for President, but refused to let his name be considered, insisting on the renomination of President Harrison.
The electoral vote of 1890 stood 271 for McKinley and 176 for Bryan. In 1900 it was 292 to 155 for Bryan.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 12.—After a good beginning today has ended unfavorably for President McKinley, but no alarm is felt.

The beef juice which the doctors gave him on Wednesday had been relished so keenly that he was given solid food Thursday morning for the first time. He was bathed and then enjoyed a breakfast of chicken broth, toast and coffee.
The President felt so well after this somewhat substantial meal that he asked for a mild cigar, which had to be refused.

A slight reaction soon followed the buoyancy of the morning. The President complained of being tired. The attending physicians at the afternoon consultation, true to their promise to take the public into their confidence, chronicled this fact with scrupulous care, but they displayed no alarm. The doctors said the President's restlessness was only natural and what might be expected.

It was explained that the trouble which existed was due to the fact that the food taken in the morning had not agreed with the President. The rise in his pulse was attributed to that fact.
It was stated positively that the consulting physicians did not believe that the failure to digest the food was due to the condition of the wounds in the stomach, which were believed to be practically healed.

The fact the food would not agree with the President could not have been anticipated, it was stated, but as soon as this was found to be the case the administration of food by the mouth was discontinued.

MANDANUS PROCEEDINGS.

Instituted by Finch Against State For Refusal to Sign Deeds.

Special to Journal.

RAISON, September 13.—Last August the Fusion board of education gave K.
B. Finch of Charlotte an option for a year on all State swamp lands at fifty cents per acre, he to sell lands in not less than thousand acre lots.

Last December this option was renewed by the Fusion board for one year, from February eleventh of this year. It is for over six hundred thousand acres.

The new board found that Finch was picking out timber lands and selling them, and declined to sign deeds for his sales. He and his attorney today met board, and upon its refusal to grant deeds, he instituted mandamus proceedings before Judge Robinson here, October 23.

Papers were this afternoon served on Governor. The Attorney general says Finch's proceeding amounts to nothing.
It is brought by Finch and Horton Corwin to whom he claims to have sold land.
