THE ELECTIONS OF NOVEMBER FIFTH.

The elections in this country on last Tuesday, November 5th, where the issue might be said to be along strict party lines, were generally favorable to the Republicans.

In New York City, the election was not on real political lines, for Shepard represented Crokerism, while Low stood for honest administration of public affairs, supported by Democrats and Republicans and others without political affiliations, but who desired the over throw of municipal rule through absen-

Politically considered, the overthrow of Croker and Crokerism, is a distinct gain for the New York Democracy.

Groker ever represented "spoils," and "spoils" totally devoid of principles of party, ethical or sentimental.

And Crokerism did not merely demoralize the local Democracy of New York City, but its pernicious influence was felt in State and nation, when the Democratic party had to meet in contest with other political parties, and contend for principles, not political plunder that might come to the victor.

With Croker down, and driven to Eng. land for a permanent residence, there is hope that Tammany can assert real principles of Democracy, and not the evil organization it has been under Croker.

Unfortunately Philadelphia failed to overthrow its "machine rulers" who have made the name of that city a reproach throughout the land, through the offensiveness of its municipal corrup

If there had been the same unity of feeling and work in Philadelphia, as in New York City, that city would have come out from under its municipal corruption. But the public sentiment seemed insufficiently aroused to the real situation, and did not solidify and overthrow the "Machine".

But generally, the country and the people are benefitted by the recent electries all over the State. It was a surprise tions, and the results are for the masses, and not for the few seeking personal

SHE HAD EVIDENCE.

"I don't think a man in love ought to be held legally responsible for all his actions," said the man with the weak eyes and peaked chin.

"Take my case, for instance. Five years ago I fell in love with a widow. She was in my thoughts day and night, and I could scarcely sleep or cat. I had become about half fool when I heard some gossip about her and decided to haul off. She sued me for breach of premise, but as I thought she had no tender epistics of mine as evidence I didn't worry much."

"Well, the suit came on?" said the old growler in the corner.

"Yes, it was called in due time."

Yes, it was called in due time." "And she had a case?"
