FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

The Bachelor Kitchen.
In these days of costly apartments the bachelor girl has evolved many ingenious schemes for making one room do the work of two. One of the latest of these schemes is called by its inventor a "bachelor's kitchen." It looks much like an old-fashioned cabinet, with dull red silk draped tightly inside. The glass doors are a snare and a delusion, however, for they slide into place and are quickly removed by unfastening an inconspicuous hook at each end. This removal leaves the back and two sides standing, but a few movements reduce them to a lovely position, where they make a table. The base is zinc covered and holds a gas stove.

In the lower part, where the doors are simply paneled, are the few cooking utensils needed and space for household stores. The bottom has a deep pan of zinc to hold ice and is too far removed from the upper portion to be affected by the heat of the stove. The finish of the wood is black stain that allows the grain to show, and the article is really a decorative piece of furniture.

The Vanity Bag.
The vanity bag is one of the graceful little features of modern life, the wardrobe. It is made of velvet or silk, dainty lined and having prettily shirred pockets inside, with plenty of space for opera glasses, handkerchiefs, purse and—whisper it—the wet powder puff and tiny mirror.

Among the quaintest bags for opera glasses are those which look like grandma's reticule. These are made of delicate brocades, lined with satin, and are drawn together with ribbons which pass through crocheted rings. They may be hung on the arm in the real old-fashioned way by ribbons.

Other opera bags of brocades in white, pale blue, pink, buff, green and lavender are lined with white satin and close like a chateau bag with a gilt clasp.

Working Embroidery.
Fancy bags of all kinds are very much in demand now. The absence of pockets in our skirts makes something of the kind an absolute necessity. Then for holding opera glasses, fan and scent bottle they are useful, while for small pieces of fancywork they are most convenient.

The bag illustrated on this page is for holding fancywork and the necessary implements. It is made in corded silk of a pretty shade of olive green.

One Way to Keep Them.
Mrs. Fuss—I haven't kept my last hired girl a month.
Mrs. Flip—Dear me! Do you keep her locked up?—Ohio State Journal.

Two Classes.
Of amateurish singers
We know two kinds, just two.
They're those who can't and do not
And those who can't and do.
—Philadelphia Press.

The Blessing of Poverty.
This is what, that shabby day,
They heard the old man tell.
"The bank is broke, but thank the Lord
I never owned a dollar."
—Atlanta Constitution.

Sapnot Opinion.
Ned—Clara says you are a perfect gentleman.
Fred—Why, she doesn't know me!
Ned—That's what I told her.—Smart Set.

A Remembrance of July.
This earth, with billiards seems to team.
It is a frosty spot.
You'd scarce believe it is the same
That erstwhile was so hot.
—Washington Star.
