In the west the bloodhound is now extensively used in the detection of crime and the capture of criminals The modern criminal is a very clustve person. He is always abreast of the times, and, quiet, skillful and often courageous, he has this advantage, that he usually does his work at night. When he has completed his task, he silently makes his escape, frequently leaving behind him no clew by which his movements may be traced. So, at least, he believes; but, try as he will, he must leave some clew. Intangible invisible as it is, it vet exists—the pe culiar odor of the human body. It is a certain guide to his footsteps. Science cannot efface it; ingenuity cannot wipe it out. This odor is as distinctive as the features of the face. No matter where person moves, no matter whether his trail is crossed by a thousand others of his kind, no matter whether the rains have fallen or hours have elapsed since' his foot pressed the earth, whe trail is still there and may be followed There is only one animal, however, which can infallibly trace but the scent after it has been on the ground for sev eral hours, and that is the bloodhound.

J.-H. Haslam of Winnipeg is thus quoted in the Buralo Commercial: We have not cordially welcomed Englishmen, but the American we like to take in and make one of us. The territory into which the American farmers are flocking is as large as Austria, France and Germany and practically in the same latitude. Our winters are not severe, our summers delightful. We raise magnificent po-tatoes, the best wheat on earth, and experiments with corn at Farse indiite that we may yet have that cerea We can grow apples, we have the best fimber, as much iron as there is in northern Minnesota and soft coal of excellent quality. Our grasing lands are also rich, and we export cattle to

Gerome is reported as being at work on a large and unusually bloodthirsty picture of the salon variety. The subject is the end of the sports in the Roject is the end of the sports in the Roman arena just as the evening suallights up a few spectators descending the steps of the arena. The bodies of the Christian martyrs, steeped in resin and set on fire, are beginning to consume, while the lions, tigers and parthers are being driven to their dens in the basement of the Collecum.
