NO NATIONAL BURIAL ECON-OMIES.

The American upon the average, takes no special heed, when it comes to the expenses of burying the dead.

Even among the poor, there must be a liberal appearance and display at the funeral, even if those doing the work, the undertaker, Hveryman, and floriat must walt for their pay.

The just payment to the dead of respect, has been the endeavor of the living from the early ages, and there is no probability that the custom will change.

Even among the nations not counted as civilized, there is always the outward respect shown the remains of the departed.

The superstition or longing to be buried in one's own land is not confined to the Chinese, for all people have the longing to be finally laid among their kindred

As to the burial economies practiced by the Ohinese and Japanese, an exchange says:

The Chinese send the bones of their dead back to China for burial, but the Japa cremate their dead and send the makes back by mall. They save thus, on an average, $54,85, for the freight on a dead Chinaman's bones averages $55, while the ashes of a dead Japanese can be put in a large envelope and mailed at a cost of 15 cents.

The transportation of the remains of a nan takes. however a long while takes, indeed, over seven years from the time of death-for the body is first in-terred in an American cemetery, and there is left till its turn comes for ship ome-an interval of waiting that ment home—an interval of waiting that amounts to seven years, as a rule. The powerful Chinese companies have charge of all this work. They look after the burial of their deceased members much as the benevolent associations of this country do. The Japanese have no such companies. They are, the Chinese may fap economical to nay the necessary say, too economical to pay the necessary weekly dues.
