Market Letter on Cotton.

By private wire, J. E. Latham & Co.

NEW YORK, January 6.—It would be difficult to imagine a more demoralized sentiment that was prevailing on the exchange today. Selling was general and continued throughout the day. More or less buying appeared on theory that a break of 80 or 80 points was to be followed by a reaction but so much selling came from Wall street that the bull side had little show. The market held around 8.60 for a time only to crash to 8.55. Liverpool was weak going off about as fast as the market went up a week ago everything was in such confusion traders hardly knew what to do this was the result of sudden change of front by the leader of the January pool after saying January was worth more money and the pool would put prices up, he comes out and says the price is high enough and looks for a break. January today selling about same price at which it was said to be worth more money. We don't care to assume any responsibility for rumors circulated 3 or 3 days ago on the floor. It will be remembered that people who tendered cotton on January were J. J. Baxter. It will be remembered also that January longs hedged themselves by selling March short. Now it is said the firm carrying January had an interview with the gentleman not a member of the exchange and as a result relations are now strained. Cotton was thrown overboard and this has caused January to go to a discount at the same time the March interest has not been taken in. To bring about a break the manifesto was sent out.

Colonel Not Without Honor, Etc.

Ed JOURNAL—The many old friends of "Col." A. M. Baker, who have known him since boyhood, were doubtless quite amused at reading the article copied from the Beattie Post Intelligencer, giving the account of the redoubtable "Colonel's" exploits in the Civil War. As the "Colonel" was but ELEVEN years old when all this occurred, the article reminds us of our lamented friend, Dr. C. W. Blackall and of the numerous "stories" created by him and the good "stories" he wrote.

The bill was for damages to the poles, wires, ropes, pulleys, transformers, and other property done by the city between May 11th, 1903 and Jan. 1st, 1908. The Council passed the bill up without any action; all desiring to know more of the details of the bill.

Rockefeller's Dollars Seal Lips.

Chicago Special to New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"John D. Rockefeller's dollars have sealed the lips of every instructor at the University of Chicago, and that institution will never become a great place of learning," Dr. John Bascom formerly president of the University of Wisconsin, but now a professor at Williams College, said today.

"In the East," he continued, "it is considered necessary to teach political economy and sociology in every large institution of learning. How are professors at the Chicago University to do this? They have accepted this man's money any in fairness to him and themselves they must not tell the young men and women who come to their school how their benefactor gained his dollars.

"Now that he has gained his dollars he looks about him for a way to get rid of some of them. He says he will endow a university. Is there a motive other than liberality? We see his money in the coffers of that institution. What is the result? The command is silence. "A discriminating beggar would not accept a penny of Rockefeller if he could get one anywhere else." I am firmly convinced that the University of Chicago would be better off if Rockefeller had never given it a dollar.
