to their health we would have more happy wives, mothers and daughters, and if they would use more intelligence in the matter of medicine, observing results, they would find that the doctor's prescriptions do not produce the many cures they are given credit for.

"In consulting with my doctor he advised me to use Wine of Cardui and I only took three months to see me."

You may secure the same relief as Miss Snyder, if you take Wine of Cardui as she took it. Theodor's Black-Draught is the companion medicine of Wine of Cardui and it is a liver and bowel regulator which assists greatly in effecting a cure. If you take these medicines according to directions, the relief and cure is simple. Some cases are cured quickly and others take longer because the disease has run longer. Remember how Miss Snyder took Wine of Cardui and she has health. The same medicines are offered you to-day.

A million suffering women have found relief in Wine of Cardui.

FOR THE CHILDREN

A Boy's Poem.

William Colton Bryant, the famous American poet, began writing verses at the early age of eight. His father was a doctor, being also very fond of the study of botany, and had accumulated quite a complete library of volumes devoted to these two subjects. Young William was a great reader, devouring everything that came in his way, and of course very early explored the contents of this library. Thus he was introduced to the study of nature, which was the subject of death, with which he was confronted in the medical works, which made the most profound impression upon him. So deeply was he stirred by its consideration that he composed a poem, for which he coined a name, calling it "Thanatopsis, or a View of Death."

After having completed it, why do you not know, he did not show it to any one, but hid it away in his father's desk. Doubtless he soon forgot its whereabouts, for soon afterward he left home to study law and then to practice his profession in a neighboring town, never having disturbed the composition. Meantime the North American Review had been started, and Dr. Bryant, happening to find the poem in a pigeonhole of his desk, sent it to the editor of the new publication. He was delighted with it and showed it to the well known critic, Richard H. Dana. He immediately exclaimed: "You have been imposed upon. No one on this side of the Atlantic is capable of writing such verses."

But of course it soon became known that this famous and desirable poem, so well known and dear to all, the equal of which, it is claimed, has never been written by one so young, was composed by young Bryant before his departure from home and when he was but a boy, less than nineteen years of age.—Robert B. Buckham in American Boy.

The Fusing Place.

I have to go to the Fusing Place
When I'm very bad,
And mother has such a sorry face,
And her eyes look sad.

But she says, in just the firmest tone,
"The boy that fusses must stay alone,
When I have been bad."

At first I pretend I do not care,
And I walk off quick with my head in the air.

But very soon
I begin to see the Fusing Place,
And to there seems a great disgrace,
So I stop my game.

And then I think of mother's eyes,
With that sorry look,
And soon I think it is time to surprise
Her over her book.

So I hunt up a smile and put it on
(For I can't come out till the frowns are gone).

How happy she'll look!

The Fusing Place? Oh, it's where you're sent
When you're naughty and mean,
And her eyes must stay till you're good again.

It's up in the attic or under the stairs
Or seated on one of the kitchen chairs,
And, oh, you feel mean!

But it doesn't matter much where it is,
This old Fusing Place,
For the very spot that seems so bad
Is also enough when you're loving and true.

So it's not where you are, but how you do,
That makes it a Fusing Place!

ENGLAND'S COAST LINE.

The Way it Has Been Bartered Back by the Founding Sea.

The variation of the line of the English coast is attracting some attention just now, having been brought to general notice by a new survey. Since the last official survey, some thirty-five years ago, the process of land absorption has continued without check at the rate of about a thousand acres per annum, even when the deduction is made for reclamation.

It is on the eastern littoral that Britain's defender and fish supplier is most exacting. Hastings, Folkestone and Dover have, it is true, to fight hard to keep it back, but their efforts are fairly successful at all events, whereas there is no stemming the assault on the Suffolk, Norfolk and Yorkshire shores.

During comparatively modern times several once thriving towns have vanished as completely as that romantic land of Lyonesse, which in the days of King Arthur knit Cornwall to what are now the Scilly Isles.

But the sea is sometimes forced to retreat in its turn in Lincolnshire, Cambridgeshire, Cheshire and near Romney Marsh. It is not a matter of history that a Danish fleet once sailed right up to Appledore and played and havoc there after the usual Danish manner? New Romney, too, still ranks as one of the original Cinque ports, although the Littlestone gulf has and two miles of land now intervene between it and the sea waves. Dunwich point is also advancing. Dunwich at the rate of eight feet per annum, and the water is so shallow on both sides as to facilitate systematic reclamation.

But in spite of these and other little gains the balance of loss is greatly against the land, the area of which in England alone has shrunk by over 40,000 acres since 1867.

Better Than Quinine.

A discovery which is considered of great value in the medical world and elsewhere has just been made by Dr. L. Restrepo of Medellin, the capital of Antioquia, in the republic of Colombia, South America.

He has successfully demonstrated that the husk of the coffee bean is of great utility in the treatment of several diseases and that in cases of malaria it has succeeded where quinine had failed.

Dr. Restrepo first used an infusion made with forty-five grams of crushed coffee in the husk and about fourteen fluid ounces of water. This was boiled for five minutes, strained and taken in one day in six doses.

With this medicine he successfully treated five patients, of whom three suffered respectively from intermittent malarial fever, chronic malarial fever and pernicious fever, and two suffered from enteric colic or chronic dysentery of malarial origin.

Caleb Cushing's Dress.

Caleb Cushing's peculiar manner of dress and his eccentricities were frequently the subject of newspaper articles. Although quite a large and portly man, his clothes always seemed to be two or three sizes too large for him and of the cheapest material. He always during both summer and winter wore a large cloth cap pulled down on his head and altogether looked anything but the brilliant jurist and diplomat. One day, after reading an unusually caustic comment upon his dress, he remarked to the writer, "I guess by the time that fool is as old as I am he will care more for comfort than fashion."
