MAN ABOUT TOWN.

A Short Lecture on the Advantages of Travel.

Some one has said that there is as much of an education in travel as there is in colleges and books. It not only teaches through the medium of observation but it imparts a rare experience which can only be obtained by travel. It makes broad minded men, and gives to the mind a better sense of affairs than years of the most careful study would do.

The first statement may be doubted by some people but nevertheless travel is an important and one may almost say that it is necessary adjunct to education. The man who has had the advantage of a liberal education and travel has a far better prospect of success than the man who has merely gone through the routine class work of school and college and graduated with little practical knowledge of the outside world.

There is a pleasure and fascination in the ever changing conditions that one meets in travel which an observing man will find to good account. It often happens that a man is the victim of an unpleasant experience while traveling and yet taking all things into consideration he would not forego the pleasure of the trip simply on account of that experience. He would gladly repeat it again, perhaps, for the sake of the pleasure derived.

There is a good bit of pleasant experience that one may gather on the little ocean trip from Norfolk to New York—and some bitter ones too. There is just this much about this particular method of travel. If one has a weak stomach, they will enjoy their trip better if they leave that organ behind. It is always sure to make trouble. On the whole if one loves the water there is no pleasant way to go to New York than by the ocean.

Then of course in the city of New York there are countless things to interest, amuse and instruct. One may live in the city of New York a full year and not exhaust the wonderful fund of interest centered in this great metropolis. Central Park, Wall street, Fifth Avenue, The Bowery, Pall street, Broadway and 1001 other places many of which will take weeks and months of visitation to become familiar with.

After you have seen all you want of New York, been robbed by cabbies and restaurant keepers and had other thrilling experiences, one may have a desire to penetrate the country further. If so the very best route to take is the Hudson River. From the very hour of leaving the steamboat pier there will be something of interest or beauty on both of them to attract the eyes of the traveler. One may be impressed for a while with the stupendous work of constructing the massive buildings that he sees on either side of the river very far before it shall have come to the Palisades and from the time the boat enters this beautiful feature still the end of the journey or Albany, the scene is one of transporting delight. The most splendid scenery on this trip will be found on the west side of the river—The Catskill Mountains. The love of nature can not fail to be charmed by this beautiful spectacle. Interest increases as one comes from time to time to places made familiar by Washington Irving's stories and record of history.

The pleasure of this trip is increased by the well made and fast moving boats, the excellent service and the entertainment on board. The whole trip is one which will never be forgotten.

Nice, light bread is always a matter of pride with the housekeeper, and we believe the cook who is not capable of making it. There are several reasons which cause bread to be inferior in quality, such as the use of poor flour, lack of care in making, etc. No matter how much experience a cook may have, she cannot produce, even with the finest flour, etc., good bread unless provided with a good leavening agent. "GOOD LUCK" Baking Powder not only raises the nicest, lightest and most healthful bread, cake, pastry, etc., but its price is within reach of all, and is as low as the high quality of materials entering into its composition will permit. That it has most satisfactorily met every demand of the most exacting housewives of the South and Southwest (and no better housewives are to be found anywhere) is fully proven by the fact that the sale of "GOOD LUCK" Baking Powder has reached such enormous proportions that it supplies largely more than half of the entire amount of baking powder sold throughout its entire field.

SOUTHERN MANUFACTURING CO., Richmond, Va., U. S. A.

The Life Insurance Company of Virginia.

From The New Orleans Daily States.
The combination in the caption above strikes us as a very happy one. First, it is insurance as a blessing and commodity, that engenders peace of mind to the policy holder; a surety of a legacy to the beneficiaries bordering as a gift from heaven for emergencies, when sorrow and mourning overshadow the home. Second, the company was born in and bears the name of Virginia. The very name thrills the heart of every Southerner. On her soil the great and prosperous American republic won its life.

Its fields watered with blood of heroes from Maine to South Carolina. Such names as Washington, Jefferson, Hancock, Carroll, Randolph, Patrick Henry and others. The synonyms of grandeur, love, state-manship, patriotism and justice. Thus this life insurance company is the embodiment of intelligence, purity in name, charitable in profession and honest in purpose.

The Virginia has a special niche in the hearts of Louisianians. It opened the door to the industrial classes, to obtain and enjoy the blessings of life insurance within their means, with indemnity for emergencies. Since 1887 the Virginia has grown like the wide spreading oak with its branches leading from New Orleans to the boundaries of every parish north, east and west. Our people have already realized from its promises hundreds of thousands of dollars. And with policies in force and increasing daily its assets keep pace with reserves and surplus to meet the demands for millions of dollars.

The above clipping from the New Orleans paper is a reminder that this Southern Company has an office in New Bern and from Superintendent N. M. Farrow it is learned that the Company is doing good work here, from the fact that ten death claims were paid here during the month of July, and the claims paid have been a personal benefit to not less than fifty individuals. It is easy to see at a glance that this Company is not only a benefactor to the New Orleans people, but in this city as well. A company doing such a commendable business as the Virginia is worthy of every one's patronage.
