GREAT FUTURE POSSIBLE FOR NORTH CAROLINA OYSTERS

A local item in the columns of the Journal tells of a remarkable quart of oysters which took only sixteen oysters to fill the measure, that was shucked from a lot of oysters brought to the New Bern market.

The most important thing in connection with these oysters was not merely their immense size, but the fact that their quality was first class, and that these oysters were a sea product gathered from local cultivation in a nearby sound of this State, proves that there is a great possible future for the North Carolina oyster, provided intelligent and discriminating laws are made to protect this great industry.

Outside of the dealers, what is known of the North Carolina oyster, today? Really nothing, for while many thousands of bushels are gathered from North Carolina waters, these oysters except the few consumed at home, lose all their identity and are given a label and brand to meet the consumptive demand of people who live at interior points and who rely upon the brand upon the can rather than a knowledge of what the oyster may be which comes in the can.

The uncultivated North-Carolina oyster has for years served under various aliases, every name except that of being known and recognized as a product from sounds of this State. In this way, no credit has come to the oyster from North Carolina, for once taken from its native bed the oyster was made to serve and be a credit to some foreign water.

This season the North Carolina oyster has been fine in size and quality, but it is not enough that this State shall be satisfied to let its waters be filled with this splendid native product, to enrich outsiders. This ever increasing yearly gathering will come to an end, and there will be no oysters to gather.

Oyster cultivation is not only one solution of the North Carolina oyster question, to continue this sea product as a source of revenue to the people of this Eastern Carolina sound country, but it means a future for the North Carolina oyster industry which will never come without this cultivation, and that oyster gathering is to be left to the present methods of gathering.

State aid, legislature and material is demanded, not methods which call for political inspectors, as the means for developing this oyster industry and giving it a true position commercially, and placing it among the established industries of North Carolina. There is a great possible future for the North Carolina oyster if wise and intelligent methods are pursued in its cultivation.

MOB LEADER BY TRADE

Hayward Got Up a Mob in Paris for Any One Who Paid Him

Paris had for years a professional leader of mobs, a man named Hayward, who would get up a mob and raise a riot any time, for any purpose, according to orders, providing a substantial amount of money was paid to him. He was employed chiefly by political leaders, and his services were in great demand at election time.

His regular business was peddling toys, songs and novelties upon the street. Many of the songs were written by him, many of the toys were his invention, and he was a man of genius in some directions as well as a strong character - so strong that he was called the "King of the Camello." If he had any principles or opinions of his own he kept them to himself. He would break up a political meeting or create an oration and make a popular hero for a fixed sum of money.

He had under his command and subject to his call at a moment's notice, night and day, between 2,000 and 3,000 street hawkers, peddlers, newsboys and other gentlemen with lungs of leather and was in the habit of paying them from a fund of framed cash every time their services were required to raise a riot or give a triumphant greeting to any politician who wanted to convince the public of his popularity.

With 600 or even 250 of his followers Hayward could raise an awful rumpus, and human beings like sheep, always follow a leader. It was Mr. Pickwick, I believe, who said that it was good policy to shoot with the loudest of the crowd, and no one could have collected such a band of howlers in Paris or anywhere else as the "King of the Camello."

He led the mobs and directed the riots in the interest of General Boulanger when the latter attempted to repeat the part of Napoleon I, and was the author of the Dreyfus riots, for which he was paid by a syndicate of army officers. The police knew all about him, but never interfered with his work because they had confidence in his ability to control his followers and realized that any interference on their part might demoralize them. So this professional mob organizer was allowed great liberties.

He could not have existed in any other city in the world. Paris is the only place that could produce such a man, and when he died the newspapers contained formal obituaries, giving a detailed account of his operations for the purpose of influencing public opinion, while more than 1,500 street peddlers followed him to his grave. - Chicago Record-Herald.

RECTOR OF ST. LUKE'S

Ashburnham, Ontario, Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

ASHBURNHAM, Ont., April 18, 1908. - I think it is only right that I should tell you what a wonderful effect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has produced. The day before Easter I was so distressed with a cold and cough that I could not think to be able to take any duties the next day, as my voice was almost choked by the cough. The same day I received an order from you for a bottle of your Cough Remedy. I at once procured a sample bottle, and took about three doses of the medicine. To my great relief the cough and cold had completely disappeared and I was able to preach three times on Easter Day. I know that this rapid and effective cure was due to your Cough Remedy. I make this testimonial without solicitation, being thankful to have found such a God-sent remedy.

Respectfully yours,

R. A. LANGFELT, M. A., Rector of St. Luke's Church, To Chamberlain Medicine Co. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Origin of the Tent

An ancient Talmudic legend relates that Adam on his expulsion from paradise encountered a cutting north wind against which his scanty garb of fig leaves proved poor protection. As he vainly cast his eyes over the desolate plain of Eden he perceived at a great distance a dead tree bush. Running thither, he crouched behind it, and while still shivering he saw a wild ass come by. And Adam cried to the beast to lie down alongside and keep him warm. But the ass spoke out: "For some time I have been in the same predicament as you, and I have found a warm coat of fur, whereupon Adam, waxed wrath and slew the ass with a piece of the tree and, with the skin and hair stripped off the ass and wrapped it around himself. But toward noon the sun grew hot and a scorching wind arising, Adam conceived the happy thought of hanging the skin over the bush and reposing in the shade thereof. It was done, the tent was invented, and civilization began. - Outing.

Mr. Stanton and His Children

Elizabeth Cary Stanton was fond of children, though not of bad ones. Once in Boston she was sitting on a young woman whose little son, a beautiful yellow curls, played about her while she conversed. The child would pull his mother's hair, tick and bump her, and did his best to try and hurt her. One time she said to Mrs. Stanton: "You are a bad boy, aren't you?" "He is a bad boy," his mother in a sad, but true confession. "I punish and chastise, though," said Mrs. Stanton. "The child" cried the young mother. "Why?" "Because," said Mrs. Stanton, "you would not cut out the corner of a child's shirt."

CAN YOU WHISTLE?

If You Can You Need Never Suffer From Dyspepsia

When the throes of indigestion and the qualms of dyspepsia are making your life miserable just turn the tip and whistle a brisk, merry tune - not a wretched, dull, half-heard whistle, but a whistle so deep and exhilarating that the whole home will be filled with the sound.

Don't be afraid somebody will hear you. Let them hear you. It will do them good. It will enliven and cheer them while it cures you.

Indigestion and dyspepsia always make one feel gloomy and depressed and morbid and blue. Everything seems to go wrong, and doubtless you soon feel one bit like whistling. But no matter, whistle anyhow.

If possible get out in the fresh air and do your whistling. If you can't go outdoors just open the window wide and whistle with all your might. Any old tune will do, so you put life and vigor into it.

Whistle, whistle, whistle! Keep it going. Don't get tired. Go on with all your might. Harder, harder!

The first thing you know the stomach will have righted itself, the liver will be working good and strong, the blood will be bounding through your veins, your brain will be clear and vigorous, and you will feel twenty years younger. - Medical Talk.

CASTORIA

The Kid You Never Forget

Woman's Work Versus Men's.

The reason why women are not paid as well as men for what seems to be an equal degree and kind of labor, says a woman writer, is in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred cases because the work is not as well done as a man would do it in the same circumstances. It is not so well done because, first, it is not the custom to train girls as severely as boys, and precedent and usage are potent forces; secondly and chiefly, because a girl considers her trade, that is, typewriting, bookkeeping, selling merchandise, dressmaking or teaching, as a raft that will float her and her fortunes until she is picked up - near shore or far at sea - by the good ship Matrimony. Then the raft is abandoned and forgotten, so far as she can forget an unpleasant episode. The boy learns his business for a lifetime. That he hopes to marry somebody is but another reason why he should master the more thoroughly every department of his work and make himself the sooner indispensable to his employer.

False Hair

Wearing false hair is a very widespread custom. In the language of the tradesman, hair grows on the heads of northern barbers in the most valuable bulk because, like the sweater, the barber and groom and his color. Germany and Sweden provide the most valuable hair, especially if it be golden blond, which is of the finest texture and of a color impossible to obtain by artificial dye. Italy and other southern nations produce only coarse and low quality wigs. Most persons of all, however, are in a true silver gray color, which is naturally long, pliable to all combs, impossible to become brittle from the fact that it is very rarely touched with any heavy cream or pomade to make it shine. It is the most valuable hair, and is the most valuable hair in the world. It is the most valuable hair in the world. It is the most valuable hair in the world.

CLIMATIC CURES

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overrated. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer climate, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited, and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. F. S. Duffy.

King's Heroism Won His Wife

As is well known, the new king of Serbia married Princess Zorka, the eldest daughter of the Prince of Montenegro, and his supporters in Germany are now spreading a story of his marriage which is more romantic perhaps than exact. Peter Karageorgevitch served as a volunteer with the Montenegrins during the Turkish war, and toward the end of the struggle the Turks captured Prince Nicholas' camp and carried off his daughter. Peter at once got together his followers and started in pursuit. Coming up with the Turks, he attacked them with the greatest fury and with his own hand slew the soldiers who were carrying off the princess. The prince of Montenegro, delighted at the rescue of his daughter, asked the gallant Peter how he could reward him, but Zorka, throwing herself into her father's arms, exclaimed, "Father, let me be his reward!" Princess Zorka had before hardly known Peter Karageorgevitch, but his desperate valor had made her fall violently in love with him, like a princess in a fairy tale.

The Bank of England's Museum

The Bank of England has a curious museum, in which the principal exhibits are its own notes. Among them is a note for a penny, which was issued by mistake and bought back by the bank for $25. Another is a note for $1,000,000. A third is a bank note which was found inside a codfish caught off the Newfoundland banks, and a fourth is a note which was in circulation for over a century and a half before it was presented for payment.

There are many forged notes in the museum, their value aggregating many millions of dollars, and there are also some notes which were recovered by divers from the sunken wreck of the British war ship Buryole.
