BRYAN'S DISLIKE TO PARKER

The only apparent reason for William J Bryan's dislike to Judge Parker, of New York, seems to have for its basis the refusal of Judge Parker to talk, and keep declaring his position on politica'

In other words, Judge Parker is not politician enough to meet the views of Mr Bryan, who is an avowed politician and one without discretion in his utterances, for Mr Bryan has taken upon himself to both answer for himself, and decide, without the asking, upon many subjects in behalf of the National and State Democracy, which are really non; of his affairs, and his assumption to give eager reply, places him in the position," as a meddler and political busy body, and the effect is seen in the rapid falling away of those who have been followers of the Nebraskan.

While W J Bryan may not come under the head of an "avowed candidate" for the Presidency, he is assuming to say, and speak in a commanding mauner as to what men are not suited for Democratic consideration, from his personal and political point of view.

While being a politician in itself, nee i not disqualify any would be Presidential candidate for Democratic honors at St Louis, it would seem judging from th : general sentiment prevailing among the masses of the people, that if a man and not strictly a politician was to be named by the National Democratic party in July, there would be a distinct gain for Democratic chances of suc-

And If the candidate to be named should be a man of high personal character, with individual traits of statesmanship, there would be votes given such a man, and an aroused enthusiasm in his favor, which could not be created by nominating a politician, however great his gift in the way of being ceaseless talker.

Why is it necessary for Judge Parker, or for that matter, any other prominent Democrat to be compelled to talk and answer any political catechism, which Mr Bryan may set up for him?

If Mr Bryan would only know it, he could easily discover that because Judge Parker refuses to chatter upon political matters, is one of the strongest elements in the New Yorker's favor, and Mr Bryan is not going to weaken Judge Parker's political chances, by expressing disapproval over the latter's refusal to talk-for Mr Brpan's personal edifica-

Washington Letter

A short time ago Repre Gibson made a speech at an ent ment at one of the Latheran ch in Washington. After he had conclud-ed an aged, gray bearded man appronched him and said:
"Gibson, I still maintain you over-dreve those nules."

The gray bearded man was General Birney, whom Gibson had not seen since the court martial episode of 1865. booking For Walker.

Rear Admiral John G. Walker de rotes more time to canal matters than to fashion plates, and could hardly be called spick and span in the civillan ciothes he wears at his work. A stran-ger would be far more likely to take Admiral Walker for a countryman than a retired mayy officer. His long whiskers are of the type so popular in rural dramas, and his rolling walk might well be taken for the movement acquired by following a plow.

A brusque young man in search of the canal commission encountered Admiral Walker in a corridor of the Corcoran building and asked pertly: "Can you tell me where I will find Walker?

"Yes," Admiral Walker replied. "Just come with me." The dapper young fellow followed Admiral Walker into his office. The admiral took a seat behind his desk and invited the young man to sit down. "Well, what can I do for you?" Admiral Walker asked of the young man, who began to squirm uneasily in his

Saul, a well known Washington correspondent, had been hambering in his newspaper, a certain congressman whose conception of his public duties did not appeal to him. For some time hardly a week had gone by that Mr. Saul had not taken a shot at his victim. One day Mr. Saul was standing in the corridor of the capitol when the congressman hove in sight and immediately bore down upon him. Mr. Saul was uncertain whether the congressman intended merely to upbraid or to inflict hodily harm, and he prepared for all emergencies. He shood his ground and cast at the congressman an inflexible and determined gase. The latter seized him by the laped of hils coat, bent over and looked him in the eye with a searching stars. You can learn something of a man's mental ability by the hat he wears. If his head is so bumpy that it seems as If he never could get a hat to fit him he probably is a gentus or an eccentric in some particular line. If his head is long from front to back he is a clear thinker and keen as a razor. So if your hat costs more money than your friend' hat does and you are harder to fit be consoled by considering that your brain is worth more.—Chicago Journal.

A "Friday" Ship. A true wtory is told of a skeptical Massachusetts captain who, way back in the early years of the republic termined to exhibit the fallacy of the Friday superstition. He contracted on a certain Friday for the building of a hip, and it was arranged that the keel of this vessel was laid on Friday, that she was launched on a Friday, name Friday, commenced loading on a Friday, named friday, commenced loading on a Friday and hauled into the stream on the same day of the week. To add to the possibilities of disaster, a negro cook named Friday was engaged, and, thus folly freighted with the siniater name. the Friday sailed on a Friday, bound to a port in the West Indies. From the day to this no tidings of the ill continued craft have been received.

The only explanation of the adage, "As boldess a iten," is that the iten's magnificent, muscular body, his noble head, great mane, the fact that he is a wild besist and—still more probably—his deep throated roar that sounds so extraordinarily bold have made him feared for generations. But the iten belongs to the family of eats and is not bold. To those who know best he is not brave even in the hour of danger. The lioness, who is smaller, less terrible to look spon and is without a mane, is brave in defense of her young, but she too, is not bold. She is merely bolder than the ilon. In comparison with any animal that can face danger and fight "fair" the ilon is a coward. To prove it let us see for a moment how it is that the ilon chooses to bunt his prey.

The lion does not hunt. In the reeds and grasses near some pool in the jungle he lies hidden where he knows that per animala will go to drink. Catlike, he leaps upon his victim, striking it with his powerful paws. Then his great jaws break the neck of the untunate creature he has taken by surprise, and the lion boldly carries off the carcass to devour it where he will. The folk who live on the outskirts of ungles in the lion's country sometimes lose their sheep and goats when a hungry llon can muster courage to go near human habitation in his search for od. He goes at night and stealthily. Who knows but that his heart goes pit-a-pat and his big limbs tremble at every midden noise? The natives of India and of Africa know, however, that they can frighten away a thieving lion by fire and torches. If cornered and forced to fight he will do battle savagely, but he doesn't seek an open fight, and any traveler will tell you

To be as bold as a partridge - as brave, unselfish, daring, heroic, as a partridge is something one might be proud to boast. No lion defends its young with the courage of a partridge. The lioness at bay will turn in defense of her cubs, will fight the enemy, will spring at him furjously; the partridge will leave its little ones quite unprotected in the nest, or wherever they may be in hiding, and will offer herself to spare them. It is not the unthinking heroism of excitement. The bird knows what she is doing and the danger. She schemes to attract attention to herself, but she manages to lead the dogs on, and she escapes. We at least bave never heard anything in the life history of the partridge so sad as that the mother bird has been taken at that supreme moment. Under the very nose of the dogs she will flutter and limp, with drooping wing, to deceive them into the belief that she is lamed and cannot fly.-New York Mall.
