NO FURTHER SOUTHERN POLIT-ICAL EMBARGO.

Craven County.

The plain and unequivocal announcement made by the Atlanta Constitution, that after the campaign of the present year, the South would no longer rest under any political embargo, which should prevent this section from putting forth a Presidential candidate, is an announcement which cannot fall to receive the endorgement of the Southern Press, and the justice of the claim made for the South, in seeking political equality with the balance of the country, will not be denied by the fair minded Press of other sections.

The greatest objection raised against the South naming or sceking to name, a Presidential or Vice-Presidential candidate, has been the question of the colored race and the south's position towards the race. Even at the present time the race question is no more important in the South, than it is in the North, either from a socialogical or political point of view, and certainly each year is finding the issue less in the South, and of greater serious moment in the

The Law of Averages.

General James Longstreet, the last lieutenant general of the Confederate army, who died on Jan. 2, 1904, took a bride of twenty-two when he was sev enty-seven years old. A Georgian who was at the Imperial when the warrior's death was announced told this story of the old general:

"One of the cheerful busybodies of Gainesville took the general to task for marrying such a young woman. Longstreet listened good humoredly, and finally the old neighbor demanded yo'self? "I b'lieve in the law of averages, replied the general, with a twinkle in his eye. 'Miss Dortch is twenty-two, an' I'm seventy-seven, so we'll average under fifty. Now, jedge, that's as straight as a problem in Euclid."

A LESSON IN MANNERS.

Way a Clever American Won Managed a Duke.

A story which belongs to a time sev eral years ago when an English duke was a much sought after perso New York society is told by Mr. James . Ford in "The Brazen Calf."

This duke, contemptuously noting the eagerness with which New York ers fawned upon him, had formed the habit of going out to dinner withou roubling himself to put on ever ress. A lady had invited him to din without knowing of this per ty and was awaiting his arrival whe her butler opened the door and cast a glance at her over the beads of interening guests which said plainly that mething was wrong. She hastened into the hall to find the duke standing there clad in the checked sack suit and flaming red tie which had seemed to him "good enough" for dinner party of American calf wor-shipers. This woman, however, had presence of mind, and she advanced upon him radiant and smiling. "No," she said decisively as she took him by the hand; "I won't accept any excuses. You've come round to tell me why it is that you can't dine here to night, and it's ever so much nicer of you to do that than just to send a note. The dinner's a little late, and you've just time to go home and dress and be back here before we begin."

The nobleman opened his month to reply, but his hostess shut him off in a second; "No; you needn't make any explanations or excuses. Remember, you've only twenty minutes, so yes must hurry."

A moment later the astour found himself hurrying toward his ho-tel and perhaps wondering what new social force it was that was impelling him in that direction.

ERVIN BERNHARD ANDERSEN.

The case to which we wish to bring your notice today is of common occurrence in nearly every household where there are children, and yet it is impossible to overestimate its importance. There is nothing complex about it. It is simply where a little boy, who had been a healthy child from birth up to two years old, had then begun gradually to fall in health. The father, in writing of the case, cannot tell definitely the cause of this decline in health, and we here introduce his letter for you to read:—

710 Racine St., Racine, Wis., December 4, 1903. read:—
710 Racine St., Racine, Wis.,
December 4, 1903.
Dear Sirs—Our little boy, now two and a half years old, was a very healthy child from birth up to last March. At that time, however, he began to gradually fail in health. Whether it was the strain of winter or not I could not say, but, at any rate, we noticed that he was losing in flesh and we could get nothing that he would eat. He fretted and cried a good deal at night, so that his rest was broken, and almost before we knew it he was in a very poor state of health. After trying various remedies, we finally decided to give the child a treatment of Ozomulsion. One thing that pleased us with this preparation was that the child became very fond of it, and would remind us when it was time to give it to him. The result of the treatment has been most surprising. After two or three weeks the boy was himself again, eating everything, putting on flesh and looking strong and well. We could not believe that a remedy would have such good results in so short a time. It is no exaggeration to say that our boy has been completely restored to health by Ozomulsion.

Very sincerely yours,

(Signed) N. Andersen.

Ozomulsion.

Very sincerely yours,

Does not the foregoing letter appeal to mothers? Is it not human in its interest? And is there not a kernel of good suggestion in it?

How can we learn of the good things of this life any better than by experience? And it is the universal experience of all who give Ozomulsion to children that this preparation produces more remarkable results than any other children's remedy in the market.

You will notice, in the foregoing letter, that a special point is made of the paintability of Ozomulsion. It is always a pleasure to give children a remedy that they like to take, and this is one phase of the Ozomulsion treatment which certainly speaks greatly in its favor. You do not have to force children to take Ozomulsion, because they like its taste, do not have to force children to take ozomulelon, because they like its taste, and in the case of very young infants they seem to know, quite as well as parents, the good that Ozomulsion does to them.

When you see a baby reach its little arms out to show its eagerness to take Ozomulsion, and afterwards notice the splendid improvement in the baby's health, you will certainly learn from this experience the good that Ozomulsion experience the good that Ozomulsion does and the favor which it finds with children. Ozomulsion is the best possible form Ozomulsion is the best possible form of cod-liver oil that was ever devised. It is far superior to any other emulsion, and it gives to cod-liver oil its greatest value by making it do its utmost good in the human system.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the beneficial properties of Ozomulsion. It overcomes the wasting of firsh and strength in adults, it cures coughs and colds, and by enriching the blood with the most essential properties of nour-ishment it gives to the system that strength and resistive power which is absolutely necessary to health.
