Origin of City Plans. All cities, with few exceptions, trace the origin of their plan to the inclosed camp, and many still show marked features of primitive fortifications. In all early scheme for defense the inclosed square was considered the best. From the time when wagons were mere'y parked on the plain to the time when buildings were constructed with blank walls to the enemy, and their facades to the open square, this plan has been universally adopted, and many of the great squares or market. places of great cities still show undeplable evidences of these precautions for defense. In the old city of Brussels the square upon which faces its wonderful city half is approached by streets so narrow that they must sure-ly have been constructed with the idea of defense in mind.—Architects and Builders' Magazine,

French Housekeeping.

A French cook turns any and every thing to advantage, and many a culinary chef d'œuvre is the result of care and skill rather than rare or costly ingredients. With just a pinch of savory herbs and a clear fire a cook will turn shreds of cold meat into deliciously appetizing morsels, gastronomic discrimination on the part of her patrons keeping up the standard of excellence. If I were asked to point out the leading characteristic of the French mind I should unhesitatingly say that it is the critical faculty, and to this faculty we owe not only the unrivaled French cuisine, but pleasures of the table generally. Here is one instance in point: One quite ripe melon to the uninitiated tastes very much like another, but a French country gentleman knows better. Whenever a melon of superlative flavor is served be orders the seeds to be set aside for planting. Thus the superlative kind is propagated. The superlative kind is propagated. The forge. Saved by Quick Wit. Isabel F. Hapgood, the translator of many of Tolstol's books, once visited the great Russian, and during her visit he told her a story of one of his ancestors. This ancestor, an army officer, was an excellent mimic. One day he was impersonating the Emperor Paul to a group of his friends when Paul himself entered and for some moments looked on, unperceived, at the antics of the young man. Tolstoi finally turned and, beholding the emperor, bowed his head and was silent. "Go on, sir," said Paul, "Continue the performance." The young man hesitated a moment. and then, folding his arms and imitating every gesture and intonation of his sovereign, he said: "Tolstol, you deserve to be degraded but I remember the thoughtiesaness of

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

The Mikado of Japan, is known personally to comparatively few foreigners. In spite of its advance during recent years Japan retains enough of its orientalism to insist upon a certain seclusion for its ruler; not that the mikado is churlish or austere to an extreme. On the contrary, he is friendly and genial in his dealings with representatives of other nations, especially with Americans. He has a pleasant appearance. He is almost six feet in height, which is unusually tall for a Japanese, and is muscular and well proportioned.

Mutsuhito is the present representa tive of the oldest royal dynasty extant. He is the one hundred and twenty-first emperor of his dynasty, which dates back in an unbroken line 2,555 years. During his reign the bonds of feudalism that bound Japan to the middle ages have been broken, a constitution being voluntarily granted by the mikado, and advances along the lines of modern civilization have been made which challenge the admiration of the world.

Hoanko, empress of Japan, is the daughter of a Japanese noble. She is fifty-four years of age, two years older than her husband.

Sully, the mild mannered protagonist of the cotton. boom, who from a poor clerk has risen to be the owner of millions. Mr. Suliy's home is in Providence, where he was educated in the public schools. Upon entering a business career he became interested in cotton and made that staple a special study. He spent two years in the south in search of knowledge on his pet subject. Mr. Sully has been a member of the New York Cotton Exchange about three years. His prominence as an operator began in October, 1902. The operations of Mr. Sully on the floor of the

"The art of making show figures said the dealer, "has improved." He took up in his hand the head of a young girl. The red lips smiled, reveal white teeth; the brown hair curled gracefully; the eyes were bright; there was a dimple in the cheek.

"A head like this," he said, "is worth $15. Heads range in price from $7 to $50. They are made of wax; they are hollow; the eyes are of glass, and the half is human hair. I'll tell you how they are made. "Wax-a great quantity of it-is bolled in a big kettle until it has the consistency of water. It is then poured into a row of hollow molds, the molds of heads, that stand awaiting it. The molds are hung up and shaken about This process causes the wax to cool and to adhere in a crust to the mold's inside. The agitation is kept up until the crust of wax has reached the thickness that the operator requires, whereupon the bot wax, the surplus, is poured back into the kettle. About the mold, which is made in two halves, a jacket is placed, and the contrivance is put away to dry.

"When the drying is complete the mold is taken off, and a man goes over the wax head with a sharp instrument, clearing out the nostrils and ears and smoothing away the lines created here and there by the junction of the mold's halves. He also inserts, with a deft movement, glass eyes in the empty eye sockets.

"Now the head passes to a girl, a girl with a strange sort of needle, the eye of which is open, or split, at the top. The girl first puts on the eyebrows. She threads the needle with a hair, runs it through the wax and, withdrawing it, leaves the hair behind, for the needle's eye, that is open at the top, makes it inevitable for the hair to stay where it is put. The girl works with great rapidity. In a few minutes she has the head adorned with a pair of long and shaggy eyebrows.

"Next she puts on the hair. For this work she uses the same sort of needle, the hair being in every case human. For the cheaper heads, however, it is Chinese hair, a human, but very lusterless, coarse variety. Beside her stands a tiny spirit lamp. This she applies to the wax when it becomes so hard that the needle won't penetrate it easily. As soon as she finishes one head she passes on to another, while the head she laid down is taken up by a man.

This men cleans it first with kerosene. Then he paints it all over a pleasant and inviting fiesh color. He tints the cheeks, the ears and the nostrile with carmine, and he paints the lips with rouge. A girl, a professional hairdresser, now takes the head in hand, curis the hair and dresses it fashionably and applies a coat of French powder to the face. The head is now finished.

"Hands and feet are made, as a rule, pler mache, enameled and painted a fiesh color, so that they look like the best wax. Hands, feet, bodies, legs and arms are made in hollow molds." The dealer led the way to the back of the shop-

"Here," he said, "are some men making forms of papier mache now. Watch The workmen had molds of various sizes and shapes before them-one the mold of a hand, another that of a foot, a third that of a whole figure from the neck down to the ankles. These molds were in halves. The papier mache that was to fill them looked in its dry state like blotting paper, Wet it resembled gray pulp. With this gray pulp the workmen lined the molds' interiors well, seeing to it that every cranny and nook got its thick lining. When the molds were filledsome were in numerous pieces-they were joined together, covered with their jackets and put away to dry.

The artists cannot protect, cannot copyright, their work in any way. Hence they are constantly being preyed upon by imitators and thieves. A deal-er, for instance, will order an original head of a woman from a noted maker of show figures. He will turn out a masterploce. The dealer will make a mold of it and sell duplicates of the head and tall and season with salt bead broadcast.

There were in the past only three or four makers of show forms in Ameri-ca. Now there are over 200. The aver-age workman at this business makes from $20 to $25 a week. The artist of

Of course everybody likes to keep the cook in a good humor and is willing to do anything to maintain her in that desirable state of mind. Nothing does more to help this cause along than improved methods and means of preparing the dally meals.
