Great Southwest

Have you ever considered the great advantage of this feature of the Southw st-pleuty of elbow room-where three, five, even ten anes may be had at the price of a single acre in your home section? It's worth considering, especially wien the great projuctive worth of the land is taken in account. It's a wonderfully fertile se tion. There is no betsgri: tural section in this courtry, and farms are cheap out ther :- in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas-simply b€cause there are more farms that farmers. Can you afford to overlook an opportunity of this kind? Our illustrated becoders will give you the particulars in detail. It not interested yourselt write for them anyway in behalf of your less favored relatives and neighbors.

of how one woman and her two children were saved from death in the awful harror of the Iroquots theater in Chicago, where so many hundreds perished in the hurricans of dame and panie, as told by Miss Etisabeth A. Reed in the Chicago Record-Herald shortly after the fearful tragedy, is unique in many ways:

Mrs. Henry Stirling, with her two children, sat in the fateful Iroquois theater on that dreadful afternoon. Little Bob was next to the side, then the mother, and Dorothy sat on the

the mother, and Dorothy sat on the other side. Beyond the six-year-old girl there was a vacant seat, but little heed was given to it as the spectacular drama went on and the wondering little folks looked open eyed upon the acenes before them.

At last an uncertain step came down the aisle and a well dressed man furched into the vacant seat. The curtain was up, but he was an old theater face, but no fear, even when he yentured to lay a caressing hand upon the

Mrs. Stirling shrank from his con-taminating touch upon Dorothy's head. He saw or feit her loathing and said brokenly, "Don't you be 'fraid-ish all right-all right-sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw-sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw." The gay drama went on, the crowd cheered, the children clapped their hands, and their merry laughter mingled with the applause, but the stranger still kept his bleared eyes upon the lovely child. Every few minutes his hand would stray lovingly over the sunny head and some expression of endearment would fall from his uncertain lips. At last Mrs. Stirling called go way-ish all right-all right-sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw-sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw."

Again the big hand touched the golden hair, and this time it strayed downward and took the little hand in loving clasp. The child looked fearlessly the attention of an usher to the prolonged annoyance, and a remonstrance into his face and smiled. The mother grew more and more nervous. Again an usher was called and a complaint made. The slender young man looked at the big fellow and concluded that prudence was the consult with another about effective methods of getting the intruder out of

The stranger looked at the stage again; this time he saw a tiny flame rapidly spreading to the scenery. Rising instantly, he took little Dorothy in his arms. Stepping beyond the mother and unheeding her frightened remonstrance, he swung the child upon one shoulder and with the other hand caught up little Bob; then with both of them pressed closely in his strong arms he walked out of the bonse. The doubly frightened mother involunta-

This precious instant was the moment of salvation. Another minute-another half minute-and it would have been too late. They had nearly reached the entrance when a cry of horror rang through the house, followed by screams of terror and shricks of

Without further volition of their own they were swept into the street. Wholly dased by the awful shock Mrs. Stirling pleaded, "Put them down-put them down new."

"No, thash all right. Where do you want to go?" "Right up this way to the Ashland block," she answered. Then the strange party pushed on through the crowd which was already rushing with helping hands to the scene of the Lurching from one side of the walk ried them to one of the higher floors, where Mrs. Stirling rushed into her where Mrs. Stirling rushed into her husband's office cryng, "Oh, Henry, the theater is burning, and this man has brought the children out?"

Although not half comprehending the horror, the father put his hand in his pocket and drew out a twenty doing his pocket and drew out a twenty doing his hill, which he infered with profuse thanks. But he sind his muney were alike ignored. With a majestic sweep of the hand the drunken here enswered, "Go way—I don't want your money—go way—thanh all right—thanh the sweetish if'l girl ever I shaw—sweetish if's girl ever I shaw if a sweetish if a swe pered out of the office.

Pretty Customs of Japan. Japanese ladies are like the French in their love of social intercourse and nversation. They pay fewer visits, but stay infinitely longer, always two or three hours and sometimes a whole day. They are received by the maid, who places a large silk cushion for them to rest upon, and much time is spent in detailed inquiries concerning each other's family. There is no spe-cial calling day in Japan. They visit when their fancy takes them, and they never go empty handed to a friend's house. The gifts are usually fruit or flowers or perhaps a fresh fish, and whatever they take is always daintily wrapped in a little box of paper or
