Mr James Spront while a leading mor shant and prominent citizen of Wilming ton, has taken the time to complie the above interesting work, although to know the gentleman, and the many business demands made upon him, it is hard to see where he had the opportanity to get together so valuable a contribution to North Carolina history.

But while a devoted officen to his city's best interests, a liberal, if unosten tatious giver to charities, Mr Sprunt is a student of the State's history, and ever ready to give or contribute when it means that North Carolina events are to be given to the world, especially to the people of the Old North State so that they may read and learn, and gain knowledge thereby, as well as be inspired to emulate in local pride and patriotism those who in the past have made world renowed and respected, the name of North Carolina.

Some ten years ago Mr James Spunt contributed a series of papers which were published in the Southport Leader. on Blockade running during the Civil War, most of these contributions telling of the daring and thrilling experiences which were met with during those years of the war, when Wilmington was the great Southern port through which the Confederacy found an outlet for its cotton to foreign markets. As Mr Spunt took part, personally, in blockade running, his articles possessed special interest, besides their merit as contributions to the history of the State. The value of such historical contributions as Mr Spunt hasmade, grows fore the people makes the history related more secure for future genera-

The divinity that doth hedge a king expresses itself in some curious ways, and to people who are not accustomed to associating with these exalted personages royal etiquette is in many points very puzzling. To those who meet Queen Alexandra constantly it probably does not seem strange to address her as "ma'am," but to unaccustomed ears this monosyllable does not sound quite respectful. Yet, according to the Ladies' Field, the queen is addressed as "ma'am" by all the members of the upper classes, the term "your majesty" being rarely used except on formal occasions, while the Princess of Wales and all the princess es of the blood royal of England are addressed in the same way. The king, the Prince of Wales and all the other English princes are addressed as "sir." Yet foreign princes and princesses bearing the title of serene highness must not be addressed as sir or ma'am, but as prince and princess. A letter to the sovereign must begin thus: "His majesty the king" and below the single word, "sir." The conclusion of the letter would be worded somewhat as follows: "I have the honor to submit myself your majesty's most humble
