Japanese Toys and Cames. The passion for toys and games of all kinds is remarkably developed among Japanese children and they are encouraged to play games in much the same way that children of other countries are urged to learn.

One of the most reurious features about Japanese child life is that each season of the year has its own particular games. In fact, the games are dis-tributed, as it were, and apportioned to different months—battledoor and shut-tlecock being played at certain seasons of the year, ball at another, and so on.

As for the dolls, they have a special fete day devoted to them, and in Japan dolls are as much a boy's playthings as

The dolls of the Japanese, boys, are generally dressed to represent historical heroes; others are attired as the ical heroes; others are attired as the emperor and empress or as heroe; or legendary figures. Japaneses children, too, on the "teast of dolls", give their holls presents and put themeon shelves or sents in the best room in the house. They also play at funns, little teards, but these, instead of being like English cards, hear quotations representing the gems of Japanese postical liberature. The game consists of drawing a card with one-half of the quotation and finding the other which bears its context.

"There is also the "game of scents." This consists in burning various perfumes and guessing the scent in question by the smell of the smoke it creates sometimes a very difficult matic is said.

GOING SCOT FREE.

The Source From Which This Old

Saying Emanated. The origin of the old saving, "Going In political circles Mr Ward's name is scot free," is this: Scot, from the Anin old law a customary tax or contribution laid on subjects according to chial assessments. The conclusion is obvious-namely, that to escape "scot free" was to avoid all such payments of dues and taxes.

Before the reform act the right to vote for parliamentary and municipal officers was vested exclusively in payspeaks of it as a certain taliage for the use of the sheriff or his balliff, and in marsh for repairing sea, walls are known by the same name. "Scot," says Camden, "is that which from various sources is gathered into one heap"-literally that which is "shot" into a general fund, from the Dutch and low German "schot." -This may have come to us through the old French "escot," diner a escot, to dine at an ordinary where each guest paid his "shot," and any one who did not contribute would be said to get off "scot free."-London Answers.

What those were like n the early historic period we know rom an examination of Egyptian nents, from a study of Greek vases or from Eutrurian or Roman anfiquities that are stored in European museums. The Egyptian deities are seated generally on granite blocks, the backs of which are raised a few inches only, giving a distant resemblance to a chair. That the Egyptians had seats more comfortable for domestic use is possible, but we have every reason to pose, although they possessed a high degree of civilization, that their idea of home comforts was not that of modern times. The common people probably sat on blocks of stone or wood or sprawled about on the ground with some sort of carpet that also served for a hed. The Strucians, ancient inhabitants of Italy before the arrival of the Romans, appear to have preferred the reclining posture in which they are usually rep-resented on the sarcophaguses in the

It would be difficult to say more in the name amount of space. Probably the most important item is to get farmers to respect themselves and their work. This will come with a better knowledge of agriculture's place in the world's economic structure and the practice of the best agricultural methods. Doing saything well with accompanying success breeds self respect. A broad gauge, successful farmer certainly has just cause to be proud of his vocation.—American Agriculturist.

The "Seedless Apple." Some readers are concerned about a report that a Colorado man has produced a "seedless apple." Among other remarkable things we are told:

He is now preparing to graft his seed-less buds on every sort of apple tree and asserts that he will be able to develop seedless apples of every variety. He will not reveal the secret of his budding and grafting. The tree on which the seedless fruit grows is unusual in that it has no blessome.

This man does well not to reveal his wonderful secret. For aught we know the tree agents may have already begun to offer this apple. The statement that this tree has no blossoms and set produces fruit is enough to convince any man who ever saw an apple tree that this is a fake. It might be possible to produce an apple with a very small core, but it is not going to grow on a tree which never blossoms—Rural New Yorker. ns.—Rural New Yorker.

Old, neglected harnesses that are dry and hard had better not be oiled. The fibers of the leather have lost their tenacity, and oil will not restore it. Oil does not add to the strength of leather. It merely softens and keeps it from cracking. It is a preventive of decay, not a restorer. A well offed and repaired harness will last as long again as a neglected one.-I. A. Leonard in American Cultivator.

Harmonious Action

The lack of unanimity among farmers on matters of legislation is one of their weakest points. Many a delegation of farmers has gone before a legislative committee to state its wants and come away without accomplishing anything because the members differed among themselves as to what they wanted. When a committee can't ask with perfect unanimity for somelators cannot be blamed for not knowing what farmers want as long as their representatives are not ment about it.—Stockman and Farmer.

Chemical Pertilizers. Farmers in the central west are suddenly waking up to find that chemical tertilizers are not poisonous, but prof-itable, says Rural New Yorker. It takes but a short memory to go back to the time when even scientific men hooted at the suggestion that anything besides clover or manure would ever be needed. Now they go about promising large returns from the use of bone meal. Within a few years they will be advocating the use of potash and dif-ferent forms of nitrogen. This means that western farmers will meet poorer sells with better farming.

This gives the larger bar-ret an advantage in foreign markets which is an object lesson in the impor-tance of having an international bar-met. The humbel box that is used in Oregen is 10 by 11 by 20 inches. It has been adopted by nearly all the prov-inces. The indications now are that it will soon take the place of the barrel for the apple trade of the United States and Canada, except perhaps for exporting.

The total number of descendants from one individual of the San José scale during the time between the middle of June and the last of November has been calculated at 3,210,080,400.
