Burrus & Co's Cotton Letter.

New Bern July 28th.

The cotton market opened quiet and steady this morning. The cables from Liverpool being a fraction lower than closing Bull support again was in evi dence, especially in the far months. The chief buying motive in the early news of too much rain in the Mississippi Valley and it caused more or less support of the late months. As usual the shorts were the only buyers, there being no outside buying in evidence. Most of the smaller shorts were frightened into covering and the late cables from Liverpool showed a disposition to follow our rise. The Fall River situation remains unchanged. With no demand from spinners, mills unable to start, prospects of a big crop in sight, and nothing to mar the growing plant it is difficult to see on what substantial rise in prices could be based, unless the extended short interests, We look for much lower prices in cotton.

THE GOOD OLD WAY

A severe cold or attack of la grippe is like a fire, the sooner you combat it the better your chances are to overpowre it. But few mothers in this age are willing to do the necessary work required to give a good old-fashioned reiable treatment such as would be ad ministered by their grandmothers, backed by Boschee'sGermanSyrup, which wa always liberality used in connection with the home treatment of colds and is still in greater household favor than any known remedy. But even without the application of the old-fashioned aids German Syrup will cure colds in a severe cold in quick time. It will cure colds in children or grown people, It relieves the congested organs allays

THE FOURTH DIMENSION.

Plato's Early Efforts to Define This Intangible Quality. In Harper's Magazine C. H. Hinton

writes on the much debated question of "The Fourth Dimension." In opening his article he cites Plato as an early exponent of this idea.

"Plato, at the beginning of the seventh book of the Republic, describes a set of prisoners who are held in chains pefore the mouth of a great cavern, bound so that they cannot turn their faces in any other direction than looking straight into the cavern. "On the wall in which the cavern ends they see their shadows projected by the sun. Their only experience of objects is derived by watching these shadows. If passers by traverse the roadway behind them all they see As the shadows of these passers by on the wall. If an object strikes them what they see is the shadow of that object striking the shadows of themselves. "Plato draws the conclusion that they would identify themselves with their shadows. Since events occurring among these shadow forms are the invariable accompaniments of all their sensations they would think that they themselves were those shadows and lived and moved in a shadow world. "Now the shadows can only move on the surface of the wall. They cannot approach and recede from it; hence the prisoners think of themselves as having a two dimensional existence only. ourselves as less than we really are. that greater which we really are.'

A number of actors were discussing recently the merits of different boarding houses in a certain city, and the argument turned on the comparative meagerness of the table board provided by the various landladies. One of the party who had listened quietly to the talk now spoke up.

"If one of you fellows really wants to put yourself on a rigid diet," he said,
"go to Mrs. —'s boarding house in

It has been well said that the gray squirrels one sees everywhere in some of our New Bugland towns are an in-dication of a higher civilization. It is dication of a higher civilization. It is certainly a piensure to see these grace-ful creatures running across trolley tracks or over lawns unmolested. A stranger would have a very high esti-mate of the people of a city that could draw to it these shy animals. Like many rodents, however, gray squirrels will set meet on occasions. They will will eat meat on occasions. They will even rob birds' nests.
