DO SMALL THINGS FAITHFULLY.

It is the world's history, the story of the individual, the striving of men and women for the top places in money power, in social distinction, in literary fame, in the arts and sciences, for any niche which may bring fame or fortune, and place the seeker above his fellows.

But in all this would-be-personal power or distinction, there is the element of selfishness, which makes the few successful ones realize the truth, "vanity of vanities, all is vanity," for the gain by the individual is apt to be at the expense of self-respect, the loss of happiness or at the sacrifice of the physical.

The world generally speaking, may be the gainer by the work of a great explorer and discoverer, by the genius of the inventor, by the findings of the scientist, by the writings of the author, yet the greatest blessings to humanity have come from the apparently trivial, from efforts of men and women who did their life work not mightily, not broad cast to the world, but by faithful and conscientious endeavor in what were seemingly small matters.

The world's greatest deeds, and the achievements which have given names to an imperishable history, were won by those who were first faithful in doing small things, and so were prepared to enact the greater, when the occasion demanded it of them.

Take the truly great achievements, and they have not been the result so much of superior genius, an unnatural intelligence, but rather were the product of individual patience, trust, fidelity to details, and the self-confidence of a soul seeking success.

It is the early and careful preparation which makes possible the greater after results. It is the trained knowledge, coupled with experience, the patience to learn thoroughly, and to make progress not by sudden starts, but along a carefully studied pathway, the willing acceptance to faithfully carry out the small affairs in life, that adds character and strength to the individual.

The training and endeavor of today is what makes easier the work of tomorrow, and the day after, and it is the right progression in life to make today do something for tomorrow, something useful, something noble, something of profit to self, be it in deed or word, in effort and struggle for better things, these are little things, but they are great in their results upon the future, and it is the future towards which every preparation is made, and in which is to be the final count, the summary of things accomplished, and the account to be rendered for failure to perform, as per the talents given to each one in life.

Burrus & Co's Cotton Letter.

New Bern, Aug 13th

Dullness has been the chief character in this week's cotton market. In the early part of the week the bulls succeeded in marking up prices, and running in some shorts on bad weather news, and the reports of damage to the crops, but prices reacted as soon as demand from the shorts ceased. The weather with the exception of some scattered showers in Atlantic states was generally fair, also to the growing crop. While a severe rain storm would do large damage to the crop in its present state, the outlook for a bumper yield, probably exceeding 12 million bales is so good that the damage of a few thousand bales could hardly be expected to influence prices. The demand for cotton goods continues very poor. Spinners are showing no disposition to buy and there is nothing in situation to make them feel nervous over their present policy with a big crop assured, and the supply greater than the demand there is no inducement for them to purchase cotton other than for their immediate needs. It is evident therefore that the price of cotton futures must decline to a point where the price will become attractive to spinners and offer some inducement for them to purchase freely, for as long as dullness in dry goods trade continues cotton is entirely too high in proportion to the law of supply and demand. We still think cotton is a sale.

ANIMAL LIFE.

Gray squirrels have been known to eat meat and rob birds' nests.

Deep sea fish make their own light by phosphorescence and are equipped with telescopic eyes.

Storks have no voice. The only noise they make is "klappering" (snapping their great red mandibles rapidly and loudly).

Among old fashioned cattlemen in Virginia the goat is held to be a preventive of disease and a clearaway of noxious herbs.

In spite of lavish payment of wolf scalp bounties the beast still holds its own in the west. On the cattle ranges their numbers are increasing.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

Forty million bottles of August Flower sold in the United States alone since its introduction! And the demand for it is still growing. Isn't that a fine showing of success? Don't it prove that August Flower has had unfailing success in the cure of indigestion and dyspepsia—the two greatest enemies of health and happiness? Does it not afford the evidence that August Flower is a sure specific for all stomach and intestinal disorders?—that it has proved itself the best of all liver regulators? August Flower has a long-time record of over thirty-five years to prove the selling qualities of that distinguishing characteristic—a success that is growing wider in its scope every day, at home and abroad, as the fame of August Flower spreads. Trial bottles 10c. regular size 75c. For sale by all druggists. 7 3 Daily.

Tools.

As with the race, so with the child, the tools for accomplishment must be proportionate in simplicity to his stages of growth. Never should that which can count for only a tool be taken for an end. Doubtless the early work of the normal school must have considerable to do with the acquisition of certain alphabets of learning and the mastery of certain working tools; but the opening up of the natural world and its needs should suggest the need of the tool for the child's use. From contact with his own immediate world of Nature, and from concepts formed from story-hearing, the child through imitation tells his own tale with vivid speech. He tells his story well because he has something to say. He is finding his way to speech because there is need for that which is overflowing from within. In time he needs to communicate his thoughts to others in written form. This can do best of all through drawing and, later on, by attempt at representation of words by means of writing. The representation of words by spelling then becomes necessary, but here also comes into play imitation. To do his work best the child should reproduce words elsewhere seen and recognized just as far as he can; but never in his early years should he be limited to the use of words in the spelling determined proper for adults. Given the written representation of elemental sounds, the child should be encouraged to grapple with a word and represent it as best he can, as he also represents in drawing. To limit a child in his attempt to record his stronger concepts to the exact spelling of the few forms with which he is familiar is to deny him all freedom in written expression. It is far better for him to express himself with unbridled liberty, and with many inaccuracies of spelling, than to be discouraged from any attempt at all. Correct spelling is not a prime test, nor essential in the language of young children. Freedom, fluency, and expression demand that the child should have an opportunity to represent himself as fully and uniquely as he may. There should be no application of close laws in the determination of primary written language any more than there should be in elementary music composition. The growing strength, the self-evident need, the continued attempt, the lifting imitation, all need the natural growth which is the best safeguard of the expression of vigorous thought. So also in drawing the child prefers the outline figure rather than the shaded relief. The pictorial representations of ancient drawings appeal more to the infant imagination than the beauty of rounded form. Even in his love for color the child reaches back to ancestral traits. It is said that aboriginal peoples do not easily recognize a representation in black and white; to them the form in color is more intelligible. So also with the child; color appeals to him more, and he should have much of it in his early personal representation. Thus, through the child's own expression, through written language and drawing, he is led up to the stage where interpretation of the representations of others is to him necessary. Then that which by premature presentation might have appeared to him as mechanical and abtruse becomes a living, meaningful exercise, and he responds with vivid interest to his profitable task. Even so must all the abstractions and difficulties of technical representations be subordinated to their true sequence in a scheme of scientific education.

Out in the bay, several miles from New Bern, he called his ten boats together, and with hats off we all stood, officers and men, while he pleaded for the Divine blessing upon our expedition, and especially did he beseech of Heaven mercy for those who should fall.

Never in my life was I more impressed by a prayer. In that fight we lost two officers, and seven men killed and ten wounded out of 160, all told. We captured the ship and burned her under the guns of a large fortress, and the Underwriter, carrying four heavy guns and a crew of one hundred men.

When the State of Virginia seceded Wood resigned his position in the United States navy and tendered his services to Governor Letcher, who assigned him to a battery on the Potomac River, there being at that time no ships, and while on that service he matured his plans which bore fruit afterwards. He was a lieutenant on the Virginia, and afterwards, at Drewry's Bluff, and after that time he was given a roving commission.

His first independent command consisted of two ship cutters and thirty men with six officers. With these he proceeded down the Rappahannock River and attacked and captured the gunboat Satellite, carrying one gun and a crew of thirty-five men, and the gunboat Reliance, a sister ship, both doing guard boat service at the mouth of the river. In this fight he lost none of his crew killed, though several were wounded, and he succeeded in bringing his prizes and prisoners up to or near Fredericksburg.

It was for this action that he was promoted to be a commander. After that he, with one boat, captured a large merchant ship in the Potomac, and after saving most of her cargo, very valuable to the Confederacy, burned her. He also captured another ship in the Chesapeake but finding she was owned entirely in Baltimore, he released her, some of her owners being Southern sympathizers.

After some torpedo service he organized the expedition that was to accompany Gen. Pickett in his attempt to regain Eastern North Carolina. Pickett did not succeed, but Wood did his part and captured after a stubborn fight, the United States gunboat Underwriters.

In the latter part of 1864 Wood converted the blockade runner Tallahassee into a cruiser, placing two small guns aboard. He ran the blockade at New Inlet, Cape Fear River, and proceeded up the coast burning several small vessels of the enemy. When off the harbor of New York he burned two or three large merchantmen, and aroused the whole navy of the United States and vessels were sent to overtake him from New York, Philadelphia and Boston. Passing an English ship, bound for New York, he boarded her and let it out that he was bound for Halifax, N S for coal. He kept his course until night, when he altered his course for the Bermuda Islands, where he obtained coal and ran back into Wilmington. The English captain gave out the news as soon as he reached New York and in less than twenty-four there were ten or a dozen United States war ships steering for Halifax. His ruse had succeeded.

On his return to Wilmington, the war being nearly closed, he went to Richmond, and left upon the evacuation, and escaped to Cuba, and after the war made Halifax his home.

One of his sons was killed in the Boer war, as a lieutenant in a Canada Regiment.

The writer never saw him after the year 1864, but as secretary of the Survivors' Association, C S N has had several pleasant letters from him.

He did his duty while on this earth, and has gone to his reward. Being on the losing side, history disdains him, and few will ever know this record, but although it may be lost to time, eternity will stamp him as a man who in every sphere of life tried his utmost to love his God and his neighbor, and while no monument will recount his many virtues we who know him will carry with us the fond recollection of having been associated with him, and in that association enjoyed the society and the counsel of one of nature's noblemen.

Table Decoration.

Much prettier and more sensible than the old fashioned enormous center decoration for the table is the new fashion of placing vases as well as candles at the four corners. The middle of the table is occupied by a low dish of flowers, some of the blossoms being merely laid on the cloth. The corner decorations should not be large enough to be in the way.

Renewing Liquid.

The article to be bronzed must be well cleaned, then gently warmed and brushed over with the following preparation, using a small quantity at a time: One dram of sal ammoniac, 15 grains of oxalic acid and one pint of vinegar, all well mixed together. Rub dry, then repeat the application till required tint is obtained.

UNHAPPINESS DISPELLED.

Men and Women Unconscious About It.

Many women weep and wail and refuse to be comforted because their once magnificent tresses have become thin and faded. Many men incline to prematurely become the first bald through the dandruff on their scalps. It will be good news to the gimmicks of both sexes, to learn that Newbro's Herpicide has been placed upon the market. This is the most acute combustible and antiseptic hair tonic for destroying the germ or microbe that is the underlying cause of all hair destruction. Herpicide is a new preparation, made after a new formula as an entirely new principle. Anyone who has used it will testify as to its worth. Try it accurately and be convinced. SSS THE BEST TONIC

In S. S. S. Nature has provided a tonic suited to every requirement of the system when in a debilitated, run-down condition. It contains no strong minerals or drugs, but is a pleasant vegetable preparation. You can find no better remedy for toning up the nerves and bringing refreshing, restful sleep.

S. S. S. improves the appetite and digestion, and its good effects are seen almost from the first dose. It acts promptly in cases of chronic dyspepsia, indigestion and all stomach troubles, and does away with the uncomfortable fullness, shortness of breath, drowsiness and dizziness that so often come after eating. S. S. S. is not only the best tonic, but possesses alterative or purifying properties, and if there is any taint, humor or poison in the blood, it searches it out and removes it. Many times a low state of health is due to a bad condition of the blood and can only be remedied by such a remedy as S. S. S.

If you suffer from debility, weakness, insomnia, nervousness, loss of appetite, bad digestion, or any of the miserable symptoms of a disordered blood, nothing will so soon put your blood in good condition, invigorate and tone up the system and restore the health as S. S. S.

I have used S. S. S. and found it to be an excellent blood purifier and tonic. My system became very much run down and debilitated. I lost twenty or more pounds in weight, had no appetite and was in a bad shape. Seeing S. S. S. advertised I began its use, and am well pleased with the results after using it for some little while. From 139 pounds to 168 is pretty good evidence of merit on the part of S. S. S. E. MARTIN.
