WHEN THE CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN.

There's Activity All Around. Great Growds Visit.

The circus affords a gala day for every city, great or small. Its advent is an epoch in the small boys life, and it is also a day of remembrance in the minds of the older people.

From time immemorial feats of strength have been objects of wonder and praise. History abounds in instances of phenomenal performances and Romans and Greek nations owed a great part of their fame to the exciting contests they had in the athletic fields and the hippodrome.

Human nature has not changed much with the "progress of the sins" and the circus is just as popular now as it was when Julius Caesar was on earth. At least one would have thought that to have seen the crowds here yesterday to attend the John Robinson Circus.

Early dawn—and that means 8:30 or 4 a. m., saw the farmers vehicles rolling New Bernward and by ten o'clock the streets in the vicinity of the feed stables—were a show of themselves on account of the mass of carriages where farmers had unhitched their horses. It was a sight that has not been seen in New Bern for many years.

There were fully 2000 carriages bunched in different places of the city. A steady stream came pouring into the city until long past noon.

The trains from the east, west and south were all loaded with people coming to the circus.

It is said that no summer excursion to Morhead had more on the cars than were on the trains coming to New Bern. They were all packed.

So much for the crowds, now for the show. First let us say that for good order and freedom from excitement Robinson's circus is premier. They have an efficient corps of policemen, an able and vigilant chief who protect the patrons of the show from robbery and insult splendidly. Then it is a pleasure to note the gentlemanly demeanor of all of the attendants from the ticket-sellers to the tent men. The ushers are alert and are remarkable in their ability to get the enormous crowds seated quickly and with so little trouble.

The procession moved through the streets of the city on about schedule time.

The only particular feature of the parade was the herd of elephants which won the admiration of all the spectators.

The doors of the great tents were opened at one o'clock and many went early to visit the menagerie. This collection, though small consists of some very fine specimens of wild animals. The lions and tigers are especially fine and there are several rare animals from Africa.

The circus opened with the pantomimic exhibition of King Solomon portraying faithfully the biblical description of the visit of the Queen of Sheba. The act was completed with a beautiful ballet, the dancers appearing in gorgeous costumes.

After the grand parade the first act was a marvelous exhibition of strength by Walter Travis at first lifted an iron dumb bell weighing 800 pounds da which afterwards was increased to 500 pounds by two men sitting on either end. He also held a heavy frame on his shoulders on which a man rode a bicycle. He also bore a plank containing a dozen men the combined weight of whom could not have been less than 1500 pounds.

An amusing act was done by the trick horses who danced and cake-walked to the music of the band very cleverly. No less amusing and interesting was the act of the elephants whose naturally ungainly awkward and ponderous appearance gave no small amount of amusement to the performance.

The trapeze performances, tumbling, equestrian acts and racing were all creditably performed and the whole show was one which was a real pleasure to see.

One of the most interesting features of the circus was a squad of Sioux Indians from the reservation near Yankton, South Dakota. They are the relics of a once very powerful tribe, which covered the country a lot of money and lives to get them "benevolently assimilated." They participate in a wild west act. They are splendid specimens of the Indian race.

It is estimated that there were 15,000 at the afternoon performance and 2,000 at night. The tent is said to accommodate 10,000 people seated and the seating capacity was taxed to its utmost.

There was but little disorder reported during the entire day—a fact which is seldom known when the crowds are so large as they were yesterday.

How to Cure Corns and Bunions.

er to soften it; then pare it down closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Expeller twice daily, rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn a few days to protect it from the shoe. As a general rule for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Expeller is unequalled. For sale by all druggists.

Back to The Old Home.

The O Marx building which was damaged by fire a few weeks ago has been repaired and Simmons & Hollowell have removed their dry goods to their old store and are ready to greet their friends and patrons.

Was it a Malicious Attack?

The writer interviewed Mr Kane, the advertising man of Forepaugh and Sells Bros. show, who was stabbed Monday by a Robinson show man, and was informed that the cutting was malicious and premeditated.

It appears that the man Service, has had, or thought he had some personal grievance against Kane, and has on divers occasions tried to provoke a quarrel with him, even going so far as to tantalize Mr Kane about some of his family misfortunes. These insults have been born, it seems with great patience by Kane, but at last he let Service understand that his persecutions must cease.

Monday morning Mr Kane says he went up to the A & N O station to get a trunk and found Service there, and the latter immediately began cursing and threatening him. He says that he tried to get rid of Mr Service but that he followed him and all at once he felt the blow and knew that he was cut, seeing a stiletto in the hand of Service. He announced to the bystanders that "Service had cut him" and asked that they not let him escape, but Service ran and was captured soon after, hiding in some stable in the rear of the ice factory.

The writer knows nothing whatever about the cause of the trouble only what was told him by Mr Kane who appears to be a very worthy gentleman, and what is here written is substantially what was related by the gentleman yesterday.

Miss Pauline Astor.

Of Miss Pauline Astor, American heroine of a naturalized Briton and fiancée of Captain Spender-Clay, an English paper says: "She is quiet, rather nice looking, sensible, self-willed, not pretty in the accepted sense, though her hair is beautiful in its wayward profusion, and her deep eyes look into yours with a sympathetic intelligence. Playing hostess to the great world since she was fourteen has given her an air of easy distinction and with it perhaps a suggestion of being a little tired."

How a Prophecy Came True.

Theodore Stavarch, living in the town of Herculina, near Jessy, writes a Rochester correspondent, had his fortune told sixty-five years ago by a zepher, who said that he would die by the sword. His fought through the Russo-Turkish war, was decorated for conspicuous bravery at Plevna and Smedereva and never received a scratch. The other day, however, at the age of seventy-five, he committed suicide with his grandsons' bayonet, thus fulfilling the ancient prophecy.

Sherridan El Dorado.

Streams of colonists are still pouring into Alberta to develop its agricultural resources, and on the shores of fifty rivers houses are rapidly being built. Some as large as those of Illinois. Iowa, the Dakotas and Minnesota are cultivated states by single families or small communities, the bulk of whom are from the States of the Union.
