ABERNETHY — OWEN DEBATE

Democratic and Republican Principles Supported in Public Discussion By The Presidential Electors Of The Third District.

There was a large attendance at the court house last night to hear the joint political debate between the Democratic Presidential Elector, Charles L. Abernethy, of Carteret county, and Thomas E. Owen of Sampson county. The former supporting the Democratic side the latter the Republican side of the question.

Mr. Ernest Green introduced the first speaker, Mr. Owen, who defended the administration and the principles it stood for. Mr. Owen began his speech by eulogizing the people of the State county and city and remarked that while they were in the minority the Republicans of this locality were a good working minority and he congratulated them on their aggressive campaign.

The first argument he used was on the tariff question. He gave the illustration of an American buying a hat in England. The hat is in America but the money is in England; while on the other hand by the protection which a tariff provides, a man buys a hat in this country and both the hat and the money are in America.

The statement made by the Democrats that Roosevelt was unsafe was taken up and dwelt on for some length and the argument went to show how he had successfully fought the trusts, where he had saved the government expense and his record on every measure and that as president he would conduct the affairs of the country safely and well. He stated that he did not believe that Parker was sincere in his professions on the gold standard. He had supported Bryan in two campaigns and had also supported a free silver man for a Senator.

Parker is an experiment he said, an untried and unknown figure but Roosevelt's three years in office shows the people what they may expect should he be elected. His career is an open book, and the people will choose him rather than an unknown element like Judge Parker.

In his reply Mr. Abernethy said that he would like to have his opponent say how he became a Republican and then answered the statement by telling how he (Owen) was a Democrat, a Populist and then a Republican, and ventured the assertion that the next lump would be into the Prohibition party.

He said the negro question was not really an issue. Roosevelt raised it when he insulted the South by forcing the equality of the negro in order to pacify the doubtful States where the negro question is an issue.

The Republican party is all the time making the boast of how it is responsible for the high prices of cotton. He then produced figures showing that cotton was at the lowest price in the history of the country during the McKinley administration and after the Dingley bill was passed. It went down to six cents. Why doesn't the Republican party make high prices for tobacco as well as cotton?

He then answered an argument of Mr. Owen in regard to extravagance showing that Grover Cleveland's first administration showed a surplus.

Space prevents the publication of a further report of the meeting. Suffice it to say that it was a very interesting and instructive discussion.
