It had been a hot week and Old Sol seemed to have gathered himself for a final effort that morning. Mrs. Golf's systematic methods had been some what interfered with by unexpected company, and Friday had actually gone by without the usual weekly renovation, much to her disgust, for like most orderly housewives she had s cute little programme to which she rigidly adhered. Even though tired muscles quivered with pain and overwrought nerves protested against such a relentless system, she would drag through the part laid out for each day, instead of taking a good rest and then

Mrs. Golf didn't keep help, partly because she wanted her three children to learn to work and partly because, beinterfere with her household economics

There was a little more discussion on the subject, and then each one start ed out to give the other a beautiful sson. It isn't often that two persons plan to get such widely divergent illustrations from the same little per formance. She was just to keep out of the way until he was through and let him do things his own way and tell him when the time was up. Wouldn't she have a jolly good joke on him though, for he never could accom-

He decided to do the sweeping first so the kitchen might cool off a trifle. and armed with besom and dustpan he mounted to the upper rooms. small space was swept first and chairs tables, etc., shoved together and covored with a nice, clean sheet to keep the dust off, while bric-a-brac of various kinds was tumbled on to the beds with a charming disregard of immacu late counterpanes and dainty pillow covers. It was inspiring to see how the carpet succumbed to each vigorous stroke of his broom, which sent the dust curling in marvelous eddles high up to the ceiling, while his face grew more apoplectic in appearance as the work progressed. But he went on, and in an incredibly short time he had swept the entire eight rooms and was rendy to begin on the dishes.

Mrs. Golf heard the dishes rattle She remembered her promise to keep out of the way. But her woman's curlosity was strong. She must take a peep at John in all the majesty of his new vocation. She managed to possess her soul in patience until fifteen minutes of the specified time, and then she ventured into the kitchen. The and clean, but the water! No need to inquire what constituted the breakfast menu. One glance was sufficient. Bits of steak floated around on tiny rafts of toasted bread, eggshells play ed tag with melon rinds, and grapes careened complacently around swirling mass as he rescued a few belated silver spoons from its shadowy

"Oh. John" excisimed the horrified woman, "you never scraped the

"Well, I should say not! What's the get them any cleaner yourself. I tell you women waste too much time on trifles. While you are getting ready to do a thing a man would have plunged into it and bad it done."

The dignity of this remark was some what impaired by his ludicrous appearance. Big white aprons are not usually very becoming to men, and, combined with Mr. Golf's ample propor tions and the huge polks dots of coal smoke, with the towel which had served as a sweeping cap still perched on his head, he was anything but an impressive figure. Nothing daunted, however, he continued his little lecture. "I tell you," said be, "women don't know how to economize time They don't know how to simplify and systematize. Perhaps the new woman with all her fine theories, will learn to bring some of the order and method of office work into the homes and that traveling concert company than go through such an experience again.

It required a good deal of herd work on the part of Mrs. Golf to-bring order out of the chaos of dust which he had created and which he stoutly insisted it was no part of his province to remove. And it made her very and to find a delicate vase shattered and the nose off a favorite statustic; but, take it all in all, she considers the experiment a grand success, for since that time John has grown remarkably reticent on the subject of improved methods and rapid results, and she realizes that an unwonted consideration has grown out of that Hitis Bunday morning splaces.

Some Seasquable Adice.

The Bird of Paradise Propably no famous bird has a small er habitat than the bird of paradise, whose beautiful feathers are so highly prized in the millinery trade. No one knows why the varieties of this beautiful bird are confined to the Island of New Guinea and the neighboring coasts of Australia. There are many other islands not far away where the conditions would seem to be equally favorable to their existence, but they are not found among them, and if we should ever see a hunter of the bird of paradise we would know that he was a native of New Guinea or the neighboring mainland of Australia or had visited those regions.
