NEW BERN, N. C., Dec. 29, 1904

PUBLIC DISAPPROVAL GREATER THAN PROHIBITION LAW.

Within a few days, January first, 1905 there will be no open saloon in New Bern in every day terms, the city will be "dry," so far as the open selling or licensed liquor selling is concerned.

The Divine injunction in this particular, "thou shalt not," has been violated beginning with the world's first parents in the Garden of Eden, and today there is the same feeling to resent, to violate, and to find justification for the act.

But greater, stronger, and more powerful than the mere statute of the law is the frown of public disapproval upon the acts of man. Many a man and woman have fled from this public disapproval, when no law could abridge their freedom for an hour.

And so it must be in New Bern, commencing next Monday, January the second, 1905, if prohibition is going to prove effective, if the abolishment of the liquor traffic in this city is going to work its true moral force, and do for those who find in the open saloon the irresistible attraction to cause them to fall time and again.

Public disapproval must be as marked upon the person who drinks to excess, or to the violation of decency, whether the drink be from the saloon, dispensary or secured, privately. It is not the question so much, how was the liquor secured, as the condemnation for its drinking, because of the evil which comes from it. Let those who pray and worked before the election to do away with the saloon, be now equally active in pointing out and condemning liquor drinking with the saloon out of business, for if it be a matter of public disapproval, there need be no guard set, no detective to taster the gully upon the prozener of liquor, no demand for jail and punishment of those who are found under the influence of liquor, for the drinker will find himself not so much under the fear of the law, but will meet the averted eyes of his neighbor, and fall to feel that he is a member of society, therefore a wanderer, a lone being, even in the crowd of his fellow men.

How High Heels Are Made. Making a wooden heel is an interesting task. The heel itself is molded on an irregular molder, a strange but very effective machine, and a singular fact about it is that not a single improvement has been made on it in twenty-five years.

The leather is stretched out, fastened with the best quality of rubber cement and then ironed, so that when the job is finished the heel looks as if it all of leather. The top lift is next attached. The lift is usually of a superior quality of sole leather, and a pair of them can be made up in less than ten days.

A Guaranteed Cure For Piles. Hemorrhoids, itching, bleeding or protruding Piles. Druggists refund money if PAIN GUARANTEED.

THE REAL TEST

66 Herpicide is in giving it a trial. There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do.

THE LAND OF NICOTINE.

Smoking Seems to Be an Essential Part of Japanese Life. I think every man, woman and child in Japan smokes. This may be an exaggeration, especially as regards the children, but it is no exaggeration to say that smoking is as much a part of the everyday life of the people as is eating or drinking, and it is indulged in by women with the same innocent, nonchalant enjoyment as is exhibited by the men.

The first class carriage into which I was shown was anything but first class, it was unclean and badly ventilated, and its only other occupants were two Japanese ladies and a man. The women had evidently just finished breakfasting in the car and were now sitting on their feet upon the seat absolutely enraptured in clouds of the most evil smelling smoke, which they puffed from long cigarettes. They were beautifully dressed in silk kimono and were undoubtedly gentlemen.

There is nothing that need be perplexing in the behavior of a woman who is so intensely attracted to the wisdom of the particular kind needed in dealing with men. She has lived with one of the number, wintered and summered him and learned when to hold her tongue and when to be in questions. She may be past mistress in the art of keeping out of the way until her society is very much wanted, and that is the acme of wisdom. There are times when every human being needs to be alone, to fight out the little ill tempers, shed the necessary tears or make repairs in one's personal appearance.

Concealed in each one of these sentences is a sentence that is worth reading. The woman who has a man's feelings for her will be a man's friend. The woman who has a man's feelings for her will be a man's friend. The woman who has a man's feelings for her will be a man's friend.

CLARA'S DIARY

She was a clerk in an office "down-town." Her name was Clara Wiley, and she was very fair, very plump and very sweet and—what was a minor detail—engaged to the "nicest fellow on earth."

It was a dull, rainy day in early fall, and as the clock struck 5 Clara rose from the high chair, placed a brown turban on her yellow hair, took up a morocco covered book from her desk and started for home.

The rain poured in torrents as she walked rapidly along the street and signaled a passing car.

Not till she was seated did she miss the book she had taken with her. Hurriedly stopping the car, she alighted, hastening up the street, seeking for the book she had lost, but it was not to be found.

While Parsons, the young, good looking, only son of Lawyer Parsons, sat in his tastefully furnished "den," thinking deeply. On an open book which had apparently been engrossing his attention lay a miniature photograph that showed the charming face of Clara Wiley.

From which it will be inferred that Parsons was that very lucky "nicest fellow on earth."

A quick rap at the door interrupted his thoughts, and he called, "Come in!" A handsome "man of thirty entered. He looked damp and cold, and in his hand he carried a small book bound in morocco.

"Lion, old boy, how are you?" exclaimed Parsons, rising and stretching out his hand to grasp his friend's.

"Fine as silk, William, and anxious to examine my find," holding up the book. It was not a very large book, but on the cover in dainty gilding were the words, "Clara's Diary."

"Lionel Stansfield's hand and carried it to the light. Lion looked at him in silent wonder, but after a minute said indifferently:

"Why so excited, my boy? Know the fair owner of 'Clara's Diary'?"

"Yes. Will you let me see it?" "Couldn't think of it, William. Tell me its owner, and I'll return it; otherwise I mean to read its contents at once." And he stepped forward with outstretched hand.

While Parsons drew back, and accidentally the book fell to the floor. Both leaped over to pick it up. It lay open at the first page, and they both read the words written there.

"To my darling, Lion, whom I may never see again, I dedicate this little book, Clara."

Lionel's face grew dull red, and he raised the book quickly and closed it, but while Parsons stood still, white to his dark, wavy hair. He spoke quietly, but with effort.

"I must have been mistaken. You know the owner?"

Lionel Stansfield smiled a very pleasant, happy smile as he replied earnestly:

"William, if I am not greatly mistaken this book belongs to one I have long thought dead—my beloved wife, Clara Wiley Stansfield."

Parsons grew paler, but answered bravely: "I am very glad for you, Lion. I'll see you tomorrow probably."

And then they said good night, for Stansfield said that Parsons wished to be alone.

Next evening Lionel Stansfield knelt beside a low cot in which lay a fair, pale woman. She must have once been the exact counterpart of Clara Wiley, but sickness and sorrow had made her look years older than she really was. She was speaking very slowly.

"And you hunted for me, Lionel, when you returned? I knew you would come back, though they all said you never would. And now I am dying. Would that I might!"

She stopped, for the door opened to admit Clara Wiley, holding an open letter in her hand. At the sight of Lionel she drew back, but her twin sister called her.

"Clara, do you not remember Lionel? He found my diary that you had bound for me and so found me."

Clara stretched out her hand impulsively and welcomed her brother-in-law in a few grateful words. Then, glancing at her letter, she said almost in a whisper:

"Where did you find it?" "Down L street, and I took it up to Parsons, intending to—" "He did not finish the sentence, for Clara fell fainting to the floor. The letter she had held fluttered to her sister's couch, and she picked it up and glanced at it indifferently.

But what she saw seemed to interest her. She read it quickly, and as Clara showed signs of returning consciousness she exclaimed:

"Lion, please leave her and go for Willie Parsons. I want him. Please hurry, Lion." And with a look of wonder on his face Lionel obeyed.

In one happy home dwelt Lionel Stansfield with his wife, and she is no longer an invalid. In another Mr. and Mrs. William Parsons are still spending their honeymoon, and it is doubtful if they will ever become less fondly happy. Boston Globe.

FACTS IN FEW LINES

There are many signs of a great commercial development in the western islands of Alaska.

The United States pays nearly 1,000,000 a day to foreign ships for carrying its products.

Rain give trouble in the London underground railway by eating the rubber insulation of the wires.

A Kansas man claims to have a swarm of bees that made twenty pounds of honey in three days.

The army of school children in New York is larger by 100,000 than the armies which fought at Liaoyang.

The Birmingham (England) health department furnishes feeding bottles for the children of impoverished patients.

A man of Halifax, N. S., wanted a vacation so badly that he paved a cemetery lot in order to pay the expenses of one.

For manufacturing 150,000 bottles of "wine" out of chemicals and exporting it as Hungarian wine a firm at Budapest has been fined $37,500.

The Russian department of commerce and navigation has decided to allow women to become employees in it as bookkeepers and typewriters.

A Polish girl of Brooklyn went to the cemetery to pray at the grave of a relative. While she was there a tombstone fell on her and killed her.

The longest name in the world is believed to be that of Miss Annie Keokah-shooah-shooah-shooah-shooah-shooah, whose letters were addressed to Honolulu.

A girl who has worked in a restaurant at Colorado Springs for a number of years has just come into a tidy little legacy of $2,000,000 from a distant English relative.

Oak beams 1,000 years old recently were removed from the Blue Bell Inn, Bedford, England. They have been made into handsome furniture by a local manufacturer.

The skeleton market shows a slump, and prices have fallen sharply owing to the Russo-Japanese war. The Boer war sent first grade skeletons down to $17.50. They promise to be lower now.

A big searchlight has been placed in the upper geyser basin of the Yellowstone National park and is turned on the geysers when they play at night. The effect is said to be strangely beautiful.

The Royal Bank of Canada has been given the contract of debursing the $31,000,000 borrowed by the Cuban government to pay the veterans of the army and other claims growing out of the war for freedom.

Governor Gesmer's castle, near Kussnacht, on the Lake of Lucerne, famous in the history of William Tell's exploits, has been sold to a company which will convert the ancient stronghold into a modern hotel.

The natives of India take more and more to beer. Formerly the consumption was very small. There are now, however, many large breweries, and last year their combined production aggregated nearly 9,000,000 gallons.

Paul Reimers, a German decorator, was so fond of reading his Bible in working hours that the foreman took it away from him and found beneath the leaves a large amount of gold leaf. Reimers had been stealing regularly.

There is activity, combined with anxiety, in Lancashire (England) coal mining circles. Many of the mines are near to the exhaustion point, and explorations in search of new ones are being carried on that will cost a large sum.

Rio de Janeiro's health department in an effort to abate a plague of rats offered 10 cents for every dead rat. The consequence was that a syndicate was formed for the importation of the vermin, and it was making money when it was exposed.

On the docks of London in one year 70,000 rats have been destroyed, but the medical officer of health for the port is doubtful whether that was as much as the natural increase of births over deaths, and more vigorous measures are to be taken.

There is a big Maltese cat in the railroad shops at Indianapolis which is the pet of all the railroad men in that city. She is said to have killed 10,000 rats and mice in her time, but now she has adopted a family of four baby mice and is carefully bringing them up.

The so called "sweet potato" is no potato at all, but belongs to an entirely different family, being truly an enlarged root of a creeping, twining vine, which has a blossom something like a morning glory. Sweet potatoes are richer in starch and sugar than the common potato.

The greatest of the world's manufacturing villages is at Pawlaret, a village in the Broad valley, at the foot of the Cotswolds. There are no fewer than 200 persons employed in turning out three trills of the bonnet, and hundreds of automatic machines are in constant operation transforming miles of wire into tons of finished pins.

A French consul from China, interviewed by the Paris Reclaire, says that the work of the Japanese in China is immense, and its effects are already striking and disgusting for Europeans. Everywhere Japanese are to be found organizing the country and instructing the people. These instructors act as spies and have even pushed down to the French Tonkin frontier.

The Canadian authorities are delighted over the success of their experiment in instructing their fishermen in the Scotch methods of catching and packing the herring. A shipment to New York of Canadian herring put up by Professor Currie and his Scotch fishermen at Camp brought from $12 to $15 a barrel, which is equal to the highest price obtained for Scotch or Norwegian herring. The value of the herring exported for the Canadian catch has been from $5 to $6.

It is a mistake to suppose that a man who is a member of the bar is a lawyer.

POLITE TO THE LAST.

A maid in whose courtyard was a well in the garden.

The Ellen in question, Susan Blanchard, an excellent but now forgotten book, "Sketches From Life" had probably never heard of Emerson's saying, "There is always time enough for courtesy," but she embodied the great sage's principle in her daily intercourse with her fellow beings.

Politeness was a ruling passion with her. To the sick man's boy she would answer, "Yes, sir, please, sir, if it is quite convenient." Mr. Blanchard, lodged with Ellen's mistress, and one day the manuscript of a friend brought a parcel of books.

The man delivered the books into Ellen's hands; then, remembering he was intrusted with a letter also, he searched his pockets in vain for the missive. Ellen, waiting in the hall, was greatly distressed.

"Oh, pray, sir, do not trouble yourself!" "Trouble myself!" exclaimed the servant. "If I have a letter to deliver I've got to deliver it." And he continued his search.

"I'm sorry to keep you waiting," broke out the apologetic Ellen.

"Why, it is I who am keeping you waiting," returned the puzzled servant. "What are you talking about? Well, I can't find the letter."

"Oh, sir," entreated the maid, "never mind! I dare say it doesn't signify. Another time will do quite as well."

Mr. Blanchard's landlady was taken sick, and every day the lodger's inquiries were answered by the faithful Ellen in somewhat this wise: "My mistress compliments, sir, and she has a very indifferent night," or "My mistress compliments, sir, and she feels very weak today."

One day when Ellen appeared with the breakfast tray, her eyes were red and her lips quivered. In response to the usual question she sobbed out: "My mistress compliments, sir, and she died this morning about 8 o'clock."

Revolution Imminent

A sure sign of approaching revolt and serious trouble in your system is nervousness, sleeplessness, or stomach upsets. Electric Bitters will quickly dismember the troublesome cause. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the Kidneys and Bowels, stimulate the Liver, and carry the blood. Run down systems benefit particularly and all the usual attending aches vanish under the searching and thorough effectiveness. Electric Bitters is only 50c, and that is returned if it doesn't give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by O. D. Bradham, druggist.

Independent Voting.

For many years, says the New York Globe, it has been supposed that independent voting was confined almost entirely to the east and that it was more generally exercised in New York than anywhere else. This was by no means the case in the late election.

In ten states, including all sections of the land, an amount of independent action never before exhibited and never before equaled in a single state was displayed. The following table, giving the votes for Roosevelt and the votes on governors, shows this in a very striking manner:

Ten Thousand Churches Painted With L & M.

There is not much money left in buying one plot of ready mixed paint, but when a quantity is needed, then it is big to buy any ready mixed paint. The Longman & Matteson L & M Paint is semi-mixed, and quickly made ready for use as follows: to four gallons of the L & M at $1.50 per gallon, add 3 gallons of Linseed Oil at 50 cts per gallon, thus making 7 gallons of paint for $2.10 or $1.10 per gallon. Weans and covers like gold.—Sold by Hyman Supply Co.

Intensified Farming.

Constantly increasing density of population and steadily advancing value of land are doing much to change the system of farming in the United States.

While large "business" farms are still to be found in the prairie regions and will continue to exist for many years to come, their number is decreasing, and the small farm becomes every year more common. Across is giving way to cultivation, and what the individual farmer lacks in acre of land he makes up in fertility. If he has less capital invested in his farm he invests more capital in the form of labor and produces practically the same results in the way of profits. Though the profits are perhaps not so large in extreme, the danger of an entire failure of crops is overcome. Intensified farming has come to stay.—Portland Oregonian.

A Costly Mistake
